British Cabinet Seeks War Powers As Support Is Pledged to Poland

Dies Witness Says Axis Envoys Laud Anti-Semites

Former Silver Shirt Organizer Tells of Nazi and Italian Interest in 'Work'

By Robert C. Albright

Contacts with officials of the German and Italian Embassies, German-American bund leaders and various so-called fascists groups were described to the House Committee on un-American activities yesterday by a former organizer for the anti-Semitic Silver Shirt organization.

Henry D. Allen, white-haired, soft-spoken witness, told of efforts to organize anti-Jewish and anti-Communist groups into an "anti-Communist federation" in Los Angeles last year, then blandly proposed to the committee that all Jews be sent to the Island of Madagascar.

Allen said calls at the German and Italian Embassies here in January of last year were on his own initiative but said officials were interested in his West Coast fight on what he called "Jewish Communism."

"Work" Here Discussed

At the Italian Embassy he said he talked to Giuseppe Cosmelli, embassy counsel. He said he could not recall the name of the "youngish" German Embassy official he talked to.

He said he asked Cosmelli "how the work against Jewish communism was progressing in Italy" and was told "very satisfactorily." He said Cosmelli told him "he hoped we would succeed in the work we were doing."

The 61-year-old Allen testified he had "quite a little talk" with the German Embassy official. There, he said, the work of the German-American bund was discussed. Again he asked about progress of anti-Semitic activities in Germany.

"He told you he had received many favorable reports on the work being done here?" asked Chairman Dies.

"I believe he did say something like that," said Allen.

Arranged Arab Picketing

As hearings recessed for the day, Chairman Dies disclosed that the committee has under subpena, and plans to call later, Gen. W. G. Krivitsky, former officer in the Soviet military intelligence. Krivitsky predicted an understanding would be reached between Hitler and Stalin at the time Maxim Litvinoff was removed as Soviet foreign affairs commissar.

Krivitsky, it was said, already has made a deposition for the committee and is waiting to be called.

Allen, who will be called back for testimony again today, told of many "missions" he performed for a Mrs. Leslie Fry, of Pasadena, Calif., head of the "Militant Christian Patriots" and publisher of "the Christian Free Press." He said among these was a trip to Washington last January to arrange for Arabs to picket a Palestine Relief convention at the Mayflower Hotel here. He said he supplied the money to pay 8 or 10 Arabs $2 a day for two days. He said they twice picketed the hotel, bearing placards.

Hazy on Woman Leader

Allen said Mrs. Fry, also known as Mrs. Schishmaress, concerning whose background he was hazy, was active in organizing the "Anti-Communist Federation" in Los Angeles last year. He declared the organization's objective was "to rid the Federal Government of Jews and Communists," but said it failed to function effectively for want of a leader."

Allen testified he and Arno Risse, assistant West Coast leader of the German-American Bund, "worked like dogs" to make the organization a success.

Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, read a letter from Allen addressed to "Dear Jim," in which Allen complained of Mrs. Fry telling him:

"Who are you in the cause, Mr. Allen? You are nothing."

He said the organization held its convention at the German House, Los Angeles headquarters of the German-American Bund, August 6, 7 and 8, 1938. He had previously charged the Silver Shirts had been denied use of other Los Angeles

Ex-Film Star Appeals Movie Income Suit

Corinne Griffith Asks $23,275 Refund on U. S. Tax Paid for 1930

Mrs. Corinne Griffith Marshall, star of the silent films and wife of George P. Marshall, who owns the Redskins, Washington professional football team, appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday for refund of $23,275.58, which she claims she overpaid on her income tax for 1930.

Family budget arrangements of many highly paid movie couples would be affected by the questions presented the highest court in Mrs. Marshall's case.

Morosco Income Involved

Her lawyers, Bernard I. Nordlinger, C. Leo D'Orsey and Milton W. King, asserted that California families, and those in eight other States, would enjoy "a new form of class privilege, a device to avoid income tax laws," unless this privilege is destroyed by a ruling in Mrs. Marshall's favor.

The laws of California and eight other States give a wife half of her husband's income and a husband half of what his wife makes. Mrs. Marshall and her first husband, Walter M. Morosco, movie producer from whom she was divorced at Juarez, Mexico, in 1934, signed a contract by which each kept all his own earnings.

Uniform Ruling Urged

She made $283,821 in 1930 and Morosco made $60,000. If they had lumped their incomes and divided them, according to California law, each would have had $171,000 legal income and each would have owed a tax of $32,000.

However, Mrs. Marshall stood by the contract and reported all her own income, paying a $55,442 tax. Morosco paid $6,754 on his $60,000. Then the Commissioner of Internal Revenue decided that this was wrong and that Morosco was obliged

Widow Is Left $2,500 Estate of Clarence Dodge

Mrs. Regina Lunt Dodge was left the $2,500 estate of her husband, Clarence Phelps Dodge, former Community Chest president, his will revealed when probate was asked in District Court yesterday.

Mr. Dodge died July 29 at Denver. The estate was all in cash and personal property.

Mr. Dodge came here in 1930 and the next year acted as vice chairman of the Community Chest budget committee. Later he became president of the chest and served four years. He also was director of the George Washington Memorial Parkway Fund and chairman of the National Committee for Social Education.

Warsaw's Press Terms Nazi Pact 'Scrap of Paper;' Officials Firm

By the Associated Press

Warsaw, Aug. 22.—Responsible Polish quarters emphasized tonight that Poland's policy toward Germany and Danzig "has not been changed in the slightest" by German-Soviet nonaggression pact negotiations.

"There is no defeatism in Poland and this country is fully prepared to fulfill her responsibility as regards the protection of peace and justice in eastern Europe," these sources asserted.

It was admitted that Germany had scored an unexpected "success" but only at the price of a "new sacrifice of German principles."

Uneasiness noticeable in some quarters was matched by the expressed conviction that the impending agreement between Berlin and Moscow was "a technical maneuver which will have no really effective result." It was stressed that details of the pact must be disclosed before it could be properly evaluated.

Foreign observers regarded the British independence guarantee to Poland now as facing a real test, in which formal signing of the guarantee would be greatly welcomed by the Warsaw government.

The United States Embassy today told Americans residing in Poland that "a serious situation obtains" and suggested those planning to leave should consider going as soon as possible, while transportation facilities are normal.

The Embassy said that those who find it necessary to remain in Poland must be prepared to comply with Polish regulations in the event of an emergency.

Ambassadors Confer

There are an estimated 2,569 American citizens in Poland, the majority of Polish descent. About 200 Americans live in Warsaw. It is believed there are few American tourists here.

[British embassy and consular officials have unofficially "advised" Britons to leave immediately, and a majority of the German colony are preparing to leave before Sunday, the United Press said.

[Many Germans, Britons and some Americans left today. — Editor's note.]

The Polish government was in close touch with Britain and France. The British and French ambassadors conferred at length with Polish Foreign Minister Beck, who also received the Rumanian ambassador.

Popular reaction is that Russia has now indicated clearly that she intends to stay out of a European war, at least in its beginning stages.

The man in the street says "I told you. The Soviet wants to wait until Europe is down and out."

Popular attention was attracted to the possible effects of Russian neutrality under a nonaggression treaty on the purchase by Poland of Soviet war supplies in case of need.

Arms Stoppage Feared

Importation of munitions and arms to Poland through Soviet Black Sea ports, it was pointed out, may be interfered with or completely shut off.

First Polish press comment was in the form of angry attacks on both Russia and Germany. Newspapers brought out into the open Poland's long-standing distrust and suspicion of Communist Russia.

"As regards duplicity of Soviet policy we have never had any illusions," said the conservative newspaper Czas. The Kurjer Warszawski contended that both Russia and Germany are inspired by "fear of their own people."

"The new document," wrote Czas, "can be nothing more than a scrap of paper, since all documents decorated with the signatures of German statesmen must now be so considered."

German Soldiers Line All Border; Pressure Stepped Up on Rumania

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—Nazis stepped up their pressure campaign against Poland and also Rumania tonight as Germany's foreign minister headed toward Moscow for quick conclusion of a nonaggression pact with powerful Soviet Russia.

German troops were massed along the entire Polish frontier, ready for any emergency, but the belief prevailed in German circles that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would have his will on demands on Poland without disturbing Europe's peace.

Arriving here from Salzburg, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop held last minute conferences before taking off at 9:38 p. m. (3:26 p. m. E. S. T.) in Hitler's new private airplane en route to Moscow to sign the agreement.

Stopping in East Prussia

Von Ribbentrop was due in the Soviet capital about noon (4 a. m. E. S. T.) tomorrow after an overnight stop in Koenigsberg, East Prussia. A second plane carried members of his retinue.

While admitting there were some details to be worked out in the negotiations with Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff, German political circles expressed the belief that von Ribbentrop would be back in Germany Friday with the pact formally signed.

Germans meanwhile expressed the view that Hitler was in a position to bring a decisive turn on Nazi demands for the return of the Free City of Danzig and territorial concessions from Poland.

Ultimatum Expected

[Reliable sources indicated Hitler might shortly issue a final warning or ultimatum to Poland, International News Service said. Hitler may act, these quarters said, 24 hours after the pact is signed. Informed quarters stressed that Hitler has made up his mind a showdown must take place within a few days. Nazis take it for granted this will have happened by the time the Fuehrer makes his scheduled speech Sunday at Tannenberg in commemoration of Germany's World War triumph over Russia.

[The United Press quoted high Nazis as predicting Poland's future depends upon whether she chooses to fight. If she should "bow to the inevitable," these Germans said, Hitler will take only those territories formerly a part of Germany giving Poland a free port in Danzig.

[If Poland should resist, they said, "there can be no security for any of Poland," declaring German armies were ready to smash across

Roosevelt on Way To Fish; Remains Silent on Europe

Aboard U. S. S. Lang at Sea, Aug. 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt, heading for the Gulf Stream aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa, paid close attention tonight to radio reports on the tense European situation, but made no comment.

"Sorry, no news since last night," a message from the Tuscaloosa reported. The ship's newspaper carried a lengthy dispatch on developments in Europe.

The President was due to arrive in the Gulf Stream about 215 miles east of Cape Cod some time tonight. From there he plans to troll in the warm waters off Norfolk. He will return to Washington on Friday.

85 Heat Unusual As Near Normal

The weather here was nearly normal yesterday.

The Weather Bureau said this situation, unusual for Washington this month, included a peak temperature of 85 at 6 p. m., low of 72 at 5 a. m., and humidity around 40 per cent.

Increasing cloudiness and slightly warmer temperatures were forecast for the District today.

World Events in Summary

GREAT BRITAIN'S CABINET, declaring its determination to stand by Poland, come what may, called Parliament into emergency session to approve semidictatorial powers for the government, and prepared to add 200,000 soldiers, sailors and civil defense workers to the already record peace-time mobilization.

GERMANY CALLED UP additional reserves and went on war-time footing, as Nazis predicted an early, and peaceful, annexation of Danzig, with some even forecasting a new "partition of Poland" should the Poles resist; there was heavy military activity in Danzig.

DEFIANT POLAND REFUSED to admit surprise at the projected German-Soviet non-aggression treaty, and emphasized that Poland would not bow to Hitler without a fight; with the army virtually mobilized for months, Poles were reported strengthening border fortifications.

SOVIET RUSSIAN OFFICIALS denied the impending pact with Germany in any way precluded alliance with Britain and France, but the Anglo-French military mission awaited orders, expecting to be called home.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S newspaper intimated the German-Russian pact would have repercussions favorable to Italy in the Balkans, as Italy called up medical corps reserves and provided for mobilization of merchant shipping. Page 4.

FRANCE CALLED 600,000 men to the colors, bringing her armed forces to an estimated 1,500,000 as the cabinet drafted emergency military decrees to meet any eventualities, and reaffirmed its obligations to Poland. Page 9.

EUROPE'S SEVEN LITTLE NEUTRALS, meeting in Brussels, prepared to open a conference on joint neutrality measures, and were reported planning a general peace appeal, in which American republics might be asked to join. Page 4.

UNITED STATES OFFICIALS prepared to evacuate American citizens in case of war, and warned Americans to leave Warsaw; ranking diplomatic and military officials conferred with Acting Secretary of State Welles on neutrality and evacuation plans.

POLAND'S AMBASSADOR to Washington, Count Jerzy Potocki, declared Poland would fight, alone if necessary, should Germany threaten her integrity. Page 9.

Russians Insist Pact Is No Bar to Triple Alliance

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 22.—Official Soviet quarters tonight termed the proposed non-aggression pact with Germany an important step toward securing the peace of Europe and contended it in no way blocked the alliance now under discussion here among Britain, France and Russia.

The military staff talks among the three, however, were interrupted as the Soviets prepared to receive Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, tomorrow.

Von Ribbentrop's plane landed at Koenigsberg, East Prussia, at 11:30 p. m. (5:30 p. m., E. S. T.) He and his entourage will resume their journey to Moscow in the morning.

His visit will be the first here by a high Nazi official.

French Envoy Sees Premier

The French ambassador, Paul-Emile Naggiar, called on Premier-Foreign Minister Molotoff tonight. Neither French nor Russian sources would discuss the purpose of the visit but it was unofficially reported that Naggiar requested a statement as to how the projected German pact would affect the existing French-Soviet pact of mutual assistance.

The British ambassador, Sir William Seeds, also saw Molotoff.

Instructions Awaited

It was learned the British and French missions visited the Kremlin this afternoon. Quarters close to the British said they visited the museum only, but the fact that War Commissar Voroshiloff conducted them created interest.

The British and French officers had met at the British embassy while awaiting instructions from home, which some diplomatic circles here predicted might be to pack and leave.

[The French council of ministers tonight decided to continue the military conversations, the International News Service reported from Paris.—Editor's note.]

These quarters held the view the British and French could not re-

Acting Secretaries Confer at Meeting Convoked by Welles

Alert American officials kept close watch yesterday on the swiftly shifting situation in Europe, weighing the projected German-Russian nonaggression treaty and considering plans to evacuate American nationals in event of war.

Coincidentally, the Capital was rife with speculation as to what President Roosevelt would do on his return Friday with respect to calling Congress back into session to rewrite the neutrality act in line with recommendations rejected at the last session.

The topmost military and diplomatic strategists of the Nation were closeted in a long conference yesterday afternoon, discussing preservation of American neutrality and safeguarding of citizens abroad.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles convoked the meeting, attended by Acting Secretary of War Johnson, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison, Gen. George Marshall, the Army Chief of Staff; Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes, Assistant Secretaries of State Berle and Messersmith, Assistant Attorney General Arnold and several officials from other Federal agencies.

Evacuation Arranged

None would comment after the two-hour parley. They indicated the European situation was thoroughly discussed along with the possible effect on the Anglo-French encirclement policy of the potential withdrawal of Russia's troops, if the Nazis and the Soviet Union conclude their nonaggression treaty.

A full report on the meeting, along with such preliminary suggestions as were ready, was sent to the President, at sea on the return voyage to Annapolis. State Department officials said dispatches were being wired to him almost hourly, keeping him constantly in touch with reports on Europe's warlike maneuvers.

In event of conflict, no particular difficulty was anticipated in removing American nationals. A spokesman for the Maritime Commission, who sat in the meeting, said plans

Oumansky May Not Return; Didn't Control the Press

Announcement of a proposed nonaggression pact between Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia finds both countries without ambassadors in Washington.

Hans Dieckhoff, Ambassador to this country from Germany, was called home November 28, 1938, to report on the "queer" attitude of the United States. This was prompted by President Roosevelt's action in calling home Ambassador Hugh Wilson to report on persecution of religious groups in Germany.

Alexander Troyanovsky, former Ambassador of the Soviet Union to this country, was called home some months ago and Counsellor Constantine Oumansky was elevated to the ambassadorship. Oumansky, however, was called home in turn and according to reports in diplomatic circles here last night may not return.

Oumansky's fall from favor, it was said, was due to his failure to keep American newspapers and magazines from publishing articles such as those in the Saturday Eve-

Glen Echo's Woman Mayor Threatened With Injunction

Glen Echo's new woman mayor faces an injunction as soon as she performs her first official act, Ernest D. Houghton, Montgomery County justice of the peace and member of the town council for seven years, said yesterday.

He will try to restrain Mrs. Beulah H. McCuen from acting as mayor because, he contends, her appointment was "illegal."

He said he spoke as a representative of Glen Echo taxpayers.

Mrs. McCuen was named mayor by the council after her husband, Henry T. McCuen, superintendent of the Friendship postoffice, resigned to comply with the Hatch act.

Houghton said the law requires the town council to elect one of its number to fill the vacancy left by resignation of a mayor until expiration of his term. Mrs. McCuen pointed out that the council had first appointed her a member.

Houghton argued, however, that she had not been sworn in as a member of the council.

England Announces She Will Fulfill Promises; Parliament Is Convoked for Thursday to Weigh Emergency Measures

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 22.—Great Britain today declared her determination to stand by Poland, called Parliament into emergency session Thursday to approve virtually dictatorial powers for the government, and, with France, called up thousands of troops to meet the growing German threat against her Polish ally.

Reports from France estimated the number of new French troops at 600,000, while informed quarters in London said Britain would mobilize 200,000 soldiers, sailors, aviators and civil defense forces for possible emergency.

The seriousness of the situation, precipitated by last night's announcement of an impending German-Soviet treaty of nonaggression, was indicated by the British government's decision to ask for emergency powers, such as are already in effect in France, permitting the cabinet to take defense measures without consulting Parliament.

King Cuts Holiday Short

King George prepared to return to London from Balmoral, Scotland, it was authoritatively reported. He has been there on a holiday, broken only by his review of the naval reserve fleet August 9.

The French were at work on a series of special decrees to permit quick military action if the crisis comes to a head in the next few days, as expected in diplomatic quarters.

Britain's new decisions were disclosed after a four-hour cabinet meeting, held simultaneously with a meeting of the French cabinet.

[One of the most important diplomats in the British government said tonight the situation was so serious that Britain was compelled to prepare for the worst, International News Service said.

[The emergency bill to be submitted to Parliament is expected to enable the cabinet to effect a 95 per cent complete mobilization of Britain's armed forces within three days.—Editor's note.]

A British government communique declared the projected German-Russian nonaggression pact would have no effect on Britain's intentions to aid Poland in case of attack.

French officials remained silent on the German-Russian pact, but France was believed to be following the same policy as Britain.

The British government expressed hope that war might be averted, but diplomatic circles saw the situation as rapidly deteriorating—partly because of the German-Russian moves.

Even though some quarters held the view that Britain and France might yet conclude a mutual assistance pact with Russia, the general view in diplomatic circles was that a German-Russian nonaggression pact would encourage Germany to press her demands against Poland.

Air Defenders Are Called Up

Significance was seen in the fact that air raid precaution and British civil defense forces were being called up as well as reserves in the army, navy and air force.

The government also announced arrangements were being made "to deal with certain matters affecting the export from this country of essential materials and commodities."

[This was interpreted in some quarters as meaning steps to supply Poland with munitions, but others, recalling reports of recent large scale purchases of copper and rubber by Germany, believed the "arrangements" would be designed to curb, or perhaps embargo, sales to Germany.—Editor's note.]

There was intense diplomatic activity in every European capital. Crowds gathered in London's Downing street and cheered the ministers as they left the cabinet meeting. European stock markets continued to suffer war jitters.

The British communique declared there was nothing in the present situation "which would justify the use of force involving a European war, with all its tragic consequences."

It added, however, that if others "insist on the use of force," Britain is "prepared and determined to resist it to the utmost."

The British government, the communique added, "had no hesitation in deciding that such an event (signing of a Soviet-German nonaggression pact) would in no way affect their obligations to Poland, which they have repeatedly stated in public, and which they are determined to fulfill."

Britain Broadcasts in German

The statement was broadcast in German, in the hope that it might make clear Britain's attitude to the German people.

Members of Parliament were summoned in a dramatic radio announcement of the cabinet's decision.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to make a detailed statement on the European situation in the House of Commons which will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:45 p. m., British summer time (8:45 a. m., E. S. T.).

He indicated he would try to push the emergency defense bill through both houses in one day. Parliament, however, probably will meet daily as long as the crisis continues.

Among the diplomats calling at the British foreign office during the day were the German and Italian charges d'affaires and the Japanese ambassador.

United States Ambassador Kennedy flew back to London from the French Riviera, where he had been on vacation for three weeks.

No decisions were taken by Britain or France regarding resumption of talks with Russia on the proposed tri-power mutual assistance pact. London and Paris were awaiting more detailed reports as to the nature of the German-Russian agreement.

The British and French military missions are remaining in Moscow, but they had no meeting with the Soviet representatives today. Russian circles in London said the nonaggression pact would be no bar to continuation of British-French negotiations in Moscow.

The emergency powers bill is similar to the measure under which the government functioned during the World War. The object of the bill is "to make exceptional provisions for the protection of the community in cases of emergency," and empowers the government to act without consulting Parliament.

Specifically, it would empower the government "to secure and regulate the supply and distribution of food, water, fuel, light and other necessities," and to maintain means of transit locomotion, as well as to take other measures for the public safety.

The military measures will carry a stage further the partial mobiliza-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, Aug. 23.

Harlan Miller

The White House made preparations for President Roosevelt to land from the cruiser Tuscaloosa at Boston or somewhere on the Maine coast, if necessary, and speed to the Capital by special train.

* * * *

His ship's running time calls for his landing at Annapolis on Friday morning, and unless the European crisis becomes tenser, this schedule will be adhered to.

But if the tempo is accelerated, the President will save 24 hours by switching to a train, and reach Washington Thursday.

* * * *

The use of an airplane was momentarily considered, but abandoned for the moment. Tradition is strong against this diminishing risk.

Frequent bulletins went out to the President from the White House via naval radio, as well as from the State Department

"—just a summer romance"

Shocked and surprised as they were, some of our State Department diplomats asserted privately that a "nonaggression" pact between Hitler and Stalin right now seems more important when first announced than it will seem in a week.

* * * *

One of the more hardened statesmen called it a "scrap of paper." The Russians, he pointed out, seem able to denounce it if Germany assails a third nation, as, for example, Poland. As for the Nazis, he said: "A treaty is just a figure of speech."

* * * *

Another official said that a pact between the leader of the "anti-Communist bloc" and the only Communist nation is the most colossal joke in diplomatic history.

"The Berlin announcement that the treaty won't affect the anticomintern front is the same as saying that the Nazis will continue to kick Russia under the table," he said. "By the same logic, Russia could go ahead and sign a mutual assistance treaty with England."

* * * *

But others took a more solemn view.

"This pact," he said, "if it lives up to advance announcements, may be the most important treaty of the twentieth century."

No one would permit himself to be quoted. It is an old custom at the State Department, and doubtless a valuable one, that the more disquieting the situation, the vaguer the statements.

"—only a little needling"

The one composed by Undersecretary Welles was a masterpiece of indefiniteness. Not only was no specific nation or situation mentioned; no continent was mentioned. There was an almost poetic reference (if it could be called a reference) to a "disquiet abroad." It would have to be abroad, since disquiet at home is handled by other branches.

* * * *

It was a remarkable group which gathered in Welles' office, with the transom closed. Not a Cabinet official, though five departments were represented; all sub-Cabinet—Welles, Messersmith an' Berle, of State; Gaston, of Treasury; Arnold, of Justice; Johnson, of War, and Edison, of Navy. When they emerged, they talked freely; Edison said there were not enough chairs for all, and Chief of Staff Marshall mentioned his Brazilian trip.

* * * *

Once again the shadow of war in Europe found two factions among the New Dealers—one which thinks a foreign war crisis might help reelect Roosevelt, and the other which fears that another world war, inevitably involving us, would mean the end of freedom, even in America.

But the betting was still strongly against war.

P. S. In the crisis, the ranking diplomat at the Russian Embassy was a secretary who speaks almost no English or French, and with whom our State Department can communicate only through an interpreter. Ambassador Oumansky is in Moscow.

Housewarming Marks Birthday Of Red Cross

Party Here Listens To World Broadcast On 75th Anniversary

"I could not stand idly by"—those words of Henri Dunant, a personal revolt against war that created the world-wide Red Cross organization, were heard around the world yesterday.

In Washington they were listened to intently by a little group of Red Cross volunteers, gathered for an anniversary celebration and a house-warming in their new headquarters at 1725 I street northwest. There leaders of the local roll call listened to exercises commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the international organization, broadcast by radio from Washington and New York to Europe and South America.

Static Breaks Appeal

Atlantic static broke into the program to cut off an address from Geneva by Judge Max Huber, president of the International Red Cross, containing an appeal to the spirit of the organization against the spirit of the times.

"The Red Cross, born of war, must grow in stature," Judge Huber was to say, "if it is to live and conquer, it must not be overshadowed and stifled by the idea of war. The Red Cross must be, and is today, a factor of peace."

The "Treaty of Mercy," signed by 16 nations on August 22, 1864, to give birth to the Red Cross, was termed "civilization's answer to hatred and bloodshed," by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, who spoke from New York. "Today in a conflict-ridden world," he said, the organization "is a tremendous bulwark against the forces of disintegration."

Not the signing of the convention, but the birth of the idea in Henri Dunant's mind was the focus of the program. Radio actors in Washington read from Dunant's book, "The Souvenir of Solferino," his moving description of one of history's bloodiest battles, and his simple appeal that led to the formation of the first international, neutral war-relief organization.

"On June 24, 1859, I met destiny," Dunant said. "Castiglione suddenly became the vortex of one of the worst calamities in the history of Europe. I watched, sickened, despairing, but then my soul stirred, and I was drawn into it, irresistibly, by a power much greater than myself."

In that "abattoir of human flesh," the Genevan banker conceived his "revolutionary" idea: "A wounded man is a pitiful human being, deserving of aid from friend and foe. There can be no distinction."

After the broadcast, Washington campaign leaders met over the punch bowl to lay plans and talk of Red Cross history. Young men and retired Army officers, young girls wondering if a new crisis would suddenly take them from the office to the battle front, older nurses with the bars and chevrons of long service on their sleeves made each other's acquaintance and looked over the campaign's new headquarters. The house on I street, lent by Corcoran Thom, sr., had been cleaned of cobwebs and fitted out with desks and posters.

Works in Peace

Born of the need to lessen the sufferings of war and seeking always an end to war, the Red Cross works no less in peacetime. Its work in disaster relief, first aid, nursing and health and safety education was recounted. This has been chiefly the contribution of America, particularly of Clara Barton, whose efforts were largely responsible for America's entrance into the international organization, Gen. Frank R. Keefer, chairman of the local chapter, pointed out.

Though in 75 years the peacetime work of the Red Cross has grown even larger, the fundamental importance of its service in time of war has never been lost sight of, they agreed. From America as from other countries, liberal sums have been sent to the relief of both sides in the Spanish and Chinese wars. Here as abroad, though to a lesser degree, Red Cross funds care for wounded veterans and soldiers in peace-time service, and a reserve is always ready for the war that may break out.

No direct antiwar campaign is possible by the nonpolitical organization, J. H. Heckman, acting national director of the Roll Call pointed out, but the Junior Red Cross gives the opportunity for another attack. By exchanging gifts with children of other lands, the members build up international friendships and a spirit of "neighborliness." This, Norman Davis said in his speech, makes the Junior Red Cross "one of the world's most important factors for the building of good will and understanding among peoples."

Other representatives of the national organization attending yesterday were Erwin Swift, vice chairman in charge of foreign insular operations; R. F. Allen, manager of the Eastern area; Miss Dorothy Thompson, public information; Charles Dillon, public information, and J. McClintock, vice chairman in charge of finance. General Chairman Edgar Morris and Mrs. Morris received the guests, while Mrs. Tyree Rodes Rivers, hostess for this year's campaign, presided over the punch bowl.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

GEORGE GALLUP

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 22.—As President Roosevelt returns this week from his vacation cruise in New England waters to face growing public interest in his plans for 1940, the monthly presidential index of the American Institute of Public Opinion shows that there has been a slight decline in the President's popularity since last month.

In the country at large, the survey shows, Roosevelt has the support of 56.6 per cent of the major party voters today as compared with 57.7 per cent in July.

This means, however, that as Congress goes home after a session in which many New Deal bills were shelved or defeated, President Roosevelt still holds a substantial majority of voters with him. He is not as popular as he was on election day, 1936, when he polled 62.5 per cent of the major party vote, but his popular strength is still something to be reckoned with in all political speculation.

At no time during the recent session of Congress did the President drop below the 56 per cent line, in spite of the fact that he was constantly under fire from Republicans and conservative Democrats. The month-by-month trend since Congress convened in January has been:

% Supporting Roosevelt
January, 1939	58%
February	58
March	58.2
April	57.1
May	56.1
June	58.1
July	57.7
August	56.6

In each of these surveys the Institute interviewed a carefully Selected cross-section of several thousand men and women in all parts of the country and all walks of life, so selected as to represent the opinions of the 45,000,000 persons in the voting population. The actual interviews have been conducted by a staff of more than 700 field investigators, and the same methods have been used which have enabled the Institute to forecast numerous State and national elections with an average error of between 3 and 4 per cent.

Today's survey underlines again the puzzle facing the Democratic leadership:

Does Roosevelt's continued popularity, which is attested in the Institute's surveys and in numerous other ways, mean that the voters want Roosevelt for a third term?

There are many New Dealers in the Washington Administration who would like to believe that it does mean that.

But Institute surveys on the third-term question indicate that a majority of voters do not favor a third term—even though many of them are enthusiastic supporters of President Roosevelt in his present term. As compared with the 58.6 per cent who support Roosevelt today, the Institute finds that only 40 per cent of the voters say they will vote for Roosevelt if he runs for a third term.

Since today's survey is the first test of Roosevelt's popularity since passage of the much-disputed WPA bill—which Roosevelt approved—abolishing the prevailing wage principle, it is interesting to note that the President's popularity declined in the past four weeks with voters in the industrial East and Midwest but increased throughout the South.

The new WPA wage rates have meant higher rates in the South than before, while WPA workers in the North and Esst have had their earnings reduced in many cases.

Whether this fact explains the sectional shifts or not, the trend in the past four weeks has been:

New England	51%	51%	0
Mid-Atlantic	57	54	—3
East Central	55	51	—4
West Central	57	55	—2
South	65	70	+5
West	63	64	+1

Most noticeable drop in any one group occurred among skilled laborers, the survey shows, who were 66 per cent for Roosevelt last month but only 64 per cent for him today.

On the whole, however, President Roosevelt is just as popular with persons on relief and WPA as he was last month, with 82 per cent of them approving him as President.

Soviet, Nazis Lack Ambassadors Here

An Old Bolshevik

Krivitsky, chief of the Soviet military intelligence from 1920 to 1937, wearer of the high decoration, the Order of the Red Banner, and one of the original Bolsheviks, exposed Communist intrigue.

He had broken with Stalin in 1937 and faded out through Spain to the United States. Two efforts have been made to kill him.

He it was who insisted nearly a year ago that Stalin would make friends with Hitler and probably with Mussolini, forecasting the events of this week.

Krivitsky predicted Stalin would "camouflage his course" by wooing England on the side, while drawing closer to Hitler.

Daily Worker Scooped

The Daily Worker, Communist newspaper in New York, was the only publication in the United States not to print Monday night a single line about the fact that Hitler and Stalin had announced plans for a nonaggression treaty. For years, the newspaper has been calling Hitler and the Nazis names as vile as can appear in type.

The Daily Worker explained it had cabled Moscow for confirmation and that nothing would be published until word was received from Moscow. Oumansky apparently had been expected to control all the American press in the same manner.

Oumansky, responsible diplomatic friends here believe, is another victim in the Stalin-Molotoff purge of Soviet diplomats considered proteges of former Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff. Ninety per cent of the Litvinoff ambassadorial representatives have been purged, according to reports here.

Once Rode High

Litvinoff was sent to the United States at the outset of the Roosevelt regime as a special ambassador of good-will when recognition of Russia by the United tSates was at stake. He rode high in the Soviet constellation at the time, but his removal last May, wrote Krivitsky, was to clear the way for rapprochement with Hitler.

Troyanovsky, who came here in January, 1934, and left in Jnue, 1938, has dropped from sight. Oumansky, who arrived in Washington in 1936 to be counsellor and later charge d'affaires, was appointed ambassador in May, this year. He left July 6 for Russia. He is now there, without standing or position.

Former Naval Attache Orloff was among those shot in one of the Stalin purges.

Only a caretaker was on hand at the Sixteenth Street Embassy last night to answer telephone calls. He had no information with which he would part, except to say "you'll have to call in the morning."

Phone calls to Ivan Okunev, assistant military attache, and Mikhail Gerasimov aroused no one. A call to Konstantin M. Koukin, the second secretary, brought word the phone had been disconnected.

No phones are listed for Dmitri Chuvakhin, first secretary, and Nikolai M. Kachirin, third secretary.

U. S. Opens Drive On Gonorrhea

The Public Health Service began yesterday a special campaign to eradicate gonorrhea.

Reporting that more persons suffered from this malady than from any other dangerous disease, the service asked for public support of a Nation-wide drive to lessen the sufferings and hardships which it said accompanied this "killing and crippling" illness.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran said "gonorrhea constantly infects more than 2,000,000 people in the United States."

Annenberg Indicted in New Income Case

Second Tax Action Claims $137,720.36 in Publishing Operations

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—For the second time in 11 days, M. L. Annenberg was accused by a Federal grand jury today of income tax law violation.

The publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer and defendant in the largest individual income tax case on record was indicted with seven others on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States of $137,720.36 in taxes, interest and penalties.

The indictment was based upon operations of the Consensus Publishing Co. from 1929 to 1936, inclusive. The company was described in the indictment as engaged in "printing and selling of run-down sheets to a class of persons known as bookmakers." It is one of the many Annenberg firms engaged in distributing turf information.

For the years covered in the indictment, the company reported a taxable income of $238,954.11 and paid a tax of $30,523.39. Uncle Sam maintained it should have paid $108,405.92 on net earnings of $745,901.55. Penalties of 50 per cent amounted to $38,941.77 and interest of 6 per cent to $20,893.06, raising the total the Government contended was owing to $137,720.36.

The indictment, one of a series which Prosecutor William J. Campbell predicted would be returned against the publisher, also named: William Molasky, St. Louis, president of the defendant concern; Jules Taylor, manager of a New York brokerage firm; Arnold W. Kruse, secretary of Annenberg's main holding corporation and a codefendant in his personal tax case; Kruse's son, Lester; James M. Ragen, sr., Chicago, general manager of Annenberg's Turf News wire service; his son and assistant, James, jr., and Herbert S. Kamin, Chicago corporation attorney.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson set bond at $10,000 each.

Annenberg and three others are at liberty under $175,000 bond awaiting trial on an indictment returned August 11 charging evasion of more than $5,500,000 in taxes, interest and penalties.

Corinne Griffith Appeals Tax Suit

to pay income taxes on half the family income, billing him for $25,000 more.

Mrs. Marshall concluded that if that was the official view she ought to pay the same tax as her husband and asked for $23,000 refund. The Treasury refused and last May she lost her suit in the Court of Claims.

The brief for Mrs. Marshall told the Supreme Court that since her contract was ruled invalid, where Morosco was concerned the Court of Claims was wrong in holding it valid against her. Such contracts, the brief said, could be used to evade taxes by couples living in Texas, California, Louisiana, Arizona, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Washington and Oklahoma.

Since some Federal courts agree with the Court of Claims and others refuse to recognize the contracts at all, the Supreme Court was urged to settle the question so that the law for the whole country would be the same.

The report came from the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission and absolved the commission of blame.

Bribery Charge Added to Fraud In Shushan Case

New Orleans, Aug. 22 (AP).—Abe L. Shushan, former Huey Long lieutenant, and four New Orleans businessmen were charged with bribery in a State court action today.

Robert J. Newman and Morvin Harris, partners in an investment company; Henry J. Miller, an accountant, and Attorney Herbert W. Waguespack were accused with Shushan.

Shushan and the others were accused of paying Waguespack $46,450 to use his influence as a member of the New Orleans Levee Board to gain approval of an offer by Newman, Harris & Co. for refunding approximately $5,000,000 in levee board bonds.

Bond for each was set at $10,000.

These same five men were indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with this deal, carried out in 1936-37.

Nazi Editors Shift And Praise Soviet; Signs Repainted

Berlin, Aug. 22 (AP).—German newspaper readers tonight saw what to them was a strange sight in view of the bitter battle Adolf Hitler had led against communism.

Newspapers printed side by side pictures of Nazidom's foreign minister, Von Ribbentrop, and of Soviet Russia's premier-foreign minister, Molotoff.

Editorial writers outdid themselves in eating the angry words they were writing about Russia, even a few weeks ago. They wrote tonight, instead, about German-Russian co-operation under Czar Alexander, and later under Bismarck.

The propaganda displays, which are a feature of Berlin streets, have had a quick repainting. Their former slogan, "Our enmmy is world bolshevism," has been replaced by a new thought, "The German people fights for peace."

Colvin Expects Early Peace in Gravel Strike

But Negotiations in Plumbers' Walkout Are at a Standstill

An early settlement of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. strike appeared likely last night as Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, reported "definite progress" in negotiations.

Colvin declared he "expected to intervene actively" today in the strike of 300 union plumbers whose walkout Monday aggravated the building construction tie-up here.

While Colvin refused to define the status of negotiations, it was reported by Conciliation Service officials that representatives of both company and union had made concessions in the dispute over a wage-hour contract for sand and gravel workers.

John Shields, spokesman for the local, No. 22975 of the Sand and Gravel Union, declared earlier that no men would return to their jobs until a contract with hourly wage provisions had been framed. Hitherto payment had been on a monthly basis, he said.

Negotiations in the plumbing strike are at a standstill, it was learned. Ernest S. Ott, business agent for Plumbers Union, Local No. 5, said the Washington committee planned to confer with international officers of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters.

Encouraged by the progress reached in the sand and gravel dispute, Government conciliators planned to concentrate equally on the plumbing strike. Even with a complete settlement of the Smoot Co. strike construction could not go forward on buildings affected by both labor disputes as pouring of concrete and plumbing installation goes on simultaneously.

Of the Federal and District construction jobs amounting to $54,000,000 now tied up, many have not yet reached the plastering stage where concrete pouring and plumbing can go on independently.

Nine individual plumbing contractors have signed individual contracts with the plumbing local, permitting continuance of work. Most of these are in nearby Virginia. Work on local buildings is still halted.

Mae Murray, Suing Mdivani, Denies Assets

Former Star Weeps In Asking $12,000 A Year for Son

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—A once-dazzling screen star, Mae Murray, wept today as she gave a deposition in her suit for $12,000 a year support for her son, Korun.

Rising and thrusting a finger at Prince David Mdivani's lawyer, she cried, "I want you to know that my whole life was sacrificed to bring my boy through his illness alive."

She accused her former husband, the Georgian prince, of "taking my stocks and bonds and money. He left me penniless," she said. "I have no property, no income."

Prince David, questioned in his luxurious apartment, to which he is confined with a leg injured in a polo game, estimated his wealth at more than $300,000.

He said he had made no effort to see their son, Korun, 12, since the divorce in 1933, because "I thought since Mae had custody of the boy I had no right to see him."

Admitting he had not contributed to his son's support, Mdivani declared he had 29 letters from his former wife, but in none of them had she asked for funds for the boy.

The prince said part of his wealth was $265,000 inherited from a brother, Prince Alexis, once husband of Barbara Hutton and who was killed in an automobile accident in Europe. Another brother, Prince Serge, met death in a polo mishap and left him $6,000. He placed his income, however, at $17,000 a year.

"When my boy was suffering from a double mastoid condition which threatened his life," Miss Murray testified, "I gave up a film contract in England which would have netted $110,000."

Milk Strikers Compromise On N. Y. Price

Agreement Initialed To Provide $2.15 Per Hundredweight

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 22.—New York's nine-day milk strike of up-State dairymen moved quickly toward settlement tonight as strike leaders and a majority of city distributors initialled an agreement on a compromise price to farmers of $2.15 a hundred weight (47 quarts).

The strike has brought widespread violence up-State and the destruction of thousands of gallons by city-bound milk.

The agreement came after two days of negotiation instigated by Mayor LaGuardia. The peace proposal will be submitted to the Dairy Farmers Union—the minority group of 15,000 farmers leading the strike—at a meeting in Utica tomorrow for ratification.

The farmers originally demanded $2.35 a hundred weight. They are now getting from 83 cents to $2.25 on the various grades. The new price of $2.15 represents a "blend" of various grade prices ranging from $1.33 to $2.60.

Four persons, two of them pickets, were shot, one seriously, in a 15-minute free-for-all between farmers and pickets at the Dairymen's League Plant in Camden, N. Y., clubs and stones injured 15 others.

McNutt, Bridges Advance in Poll Of '40 Sentiment

A surge forward in Democratic ranks for Paul V. McNutt to be the 1940 Presidential nominee, and among Republicans for Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, was reported yesterday by the Columbia Survey, based on reactions of 3,193 weekly newspaper editors in the Farm Belt.

The Survey said President Roosevelt remained slightly ahead of Vice President Garner, first and second, respectively, but that McNutt's strength showed an increase over the last poll in June. The leading Republican contenders were Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; District Attorney Dewey, of New York, and Senator Taft, of Ohio. Bridges trailed these, but his popularity was found to have increased since the last poll.

A Republican victory in 1940 was anticipated by 63 per cent of the editors, who operate newspapers in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

Georgia Backing Garner for 1940, Says Sen. George

Vice President John N. Garner has "very strong" support for the Democratic Presidential nomination in Georgia, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), declared here yesterday.

President Roosevelt personally appealed to Georgia to "purge" George from the Senate last November, but the veteran legislator won handily.

Should President Roosevelt attempt to read Democrats out of the party during the 1940 elections, it will be a "mistake" and he will not succeed, George said.

He forecast there would be more uninstructed State delegations to the 1940 Democratic convention than in recent years.

"The feeling prevails in many States that each will hold a strategic position in the convention and that with an uninstructed delegation, freedom of action can be best preserved," George explained.

50 Women Spared Testifying as 5 Face Bingo Trial

Five persons appeared in Police Court yesterday charged with setting up a gaming table—bingo playing—and between 50 and 60 middle-aged women, patrons of "Billy's Social and Good Will Club, Inc." were called as witnesss.

The women were summoned by the Government but were spared the embarrassment of testifying when the cases were continued until September 12.

The defendants, all accused in connection with the operation of the club located at the Northeast Masonic Temple, were William (Billy) E. Flynn, his son and daughter-in-law, James A. and Dorothy A. Flynn, all of the 1300 block Rittenhouse street northeast; Mrs. Ethel L. Rogers, 200 block First street southwest, and George C. Lowry, first block V street northeast. All pleaded not guilty.

Sergt. W. T. Murphy and a squad of Ninth Precinct policemen arrested the group Saturday night. Five were charged while the 250 patrons were released to appear as witnesses.

$175,898,000 Paid In 1937 Undivided Profits Taxes

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that corporations had paid $175,898,000 in undistributed profits taxes on their 1937 operations, the last year in which the original rates of the controversial levy were in effect.

On 1936 business, the first year of the tax, the yield was $144,972,000. For 1938 and 1939, Congress cut the original 7 to 27 per cent undistributed profits rates to 2½ per cent, and the last session abolished the tax altogether beginning with 1940. The figures were contained in a tabulation of corporation income tax returns for 1937.

Although the business decline of the last quarter of 1937 cut into profits of that year, the report showed that the $141,967,201,000 gross income of the 477,839 reporting corporations was the largest since 1929.

Insurance Hearing To Begin Today

The National Economic Committee announced yesterday that four witnesses had been summoned to testify concerning industrial insurance practices at hearings beginning this afternoon.

Among the witnesses are Leo P. Rock, of Baltimore, president of the Monumental Life Insurance Co.; Henry P. Sutphen, of Newark, vice president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America; Leroy A. Lincoln, of New York, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; C. F. Williams, of Cincinnati, president of the Western & Southern Life Insurance Co.

Candy Venders Held in 'Numbers'

Two confection venders yesterday were taken from their truck parked in front of a Government office building and charged with lottery law violations, and a third man was arrested after he allegedly acted as "pickup" man.

Vice squad detectives said they had the truck, parked in the 1900 block New York avenue northwest, under scrutiny for several days and witnessed scores of taxicab operators and Government employes apparently placing numbers bets.

Yesterday afternoon, police said, Joseph Sansone, 30, of the 3000 block P street northwest, approached the truck and then drove away in an automobile. Followed to the 2400 block K street northwest, he was arrested and more than 2,000 alleged numbers slips and about $100 were confiscated.

While Sansone was being followed, a second group of police took into custody Harry P. Jones, 67, 2300 Eighteenth street northwest, and James R. Jones, 2000 block Eighteenth street northwest. They were operators of the "store on wheels," the investigators said.

All the men were charged with operating a lottery and the possession of lottery slips and were released under $1,500 bail.

SEC Will Fight Stock 'Tipsters'

By the Associated Press

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that investment counsel organizations were anxious to elliminate "tipster" investment services "masquerading as bonafide" advisory groups.

In a report to be filed with Congress, the SEC said it would make recommendations concerning investment counselors and investment trusts, with proposals for regulation based upon a recent investigation of firms giving advice to investors.

Individuals without the requisite qualifications and financial responsibility who indulge in exaggerated claims constituted a menace, not only to the investor but to the investment counsel indusry, the commission said.

Brick Union Certified

The Labor Board certified the United Brick and Clay Workers Union (C. I. O.) yesterday as exclusive bargaining agent for employes of the Locke Insulator Corporation, Baltimore. Certification was based on the results of a board-conducted election August 2.

Andrews to Rule On Textile Pay Soon

A decision from Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the wage-hour act, was expected within a month on the proposed 32½-cent-an-hour minimum wage for the textile industry.

Final arguments for and against the proposed universal minimum wage recommended by a textile industry committee were received yesterday by the wage-hour division.

Southern groups opposed the recommendation on the grounds their small plants would be closed by the wage order and Northern manufacturers supporting the recommendation. The A. F. of L. and C. I. O. textile unions advocated adoption of the order, which would affect about 700,000 workers.

Duce's Journal Is Gratified By Soviet Pact

Russian Assistance In 'Encirclement' Is Excluded, It Says

Milan (Wednesday), Aug. 23.—Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo d'Italia asserted today that a German-Soviet nonaggression pact would produce an effect in certain Balkan and Near Eastern countries which "interests Italy."

The newspaper said such a plan absolutely excluded Soviet participation in British-French "encirclement" of the axis powers and "cannot fail to have a healthy effect on certain zones of the Balkan and Near East which, being nearer, interests Italy."

Il Popolo's interpretation was at variance with that of informed observers here who previously had indicated the pact would include clauses which would make it possible for Soviet Russia to go ahead with mutual assistance pacts with England and France.

Greece, Turkey Named

The paper named Greece, Turkey and Rumania as three countries which, as well as Poland, now "have time to reason and reflect." All three have been drawn into the French-British front by mutual assistance treaties or guarantees of independence.

The assertions of the Duce's newspaper came as some diplomats forecast that if the pact were successful in opening the way for eastward gains by Germany without war, Italy would speedily move toward the southern Balkans for compensatory gains of influence if not of territory.

A Soviet-Russian nonaggression pact with Germany would not necessarily exclude Russia from joining an alliance with Great Britain and France, one informed observer said tonight.

The pact, this informant said, will contain a clause providing for its denunciation in the event either party commits an act of aggression against a third.

(This would mean that if Germany attacked Poland, Russia could release herself from the pledge to remain neutral and Russia might even join Britain and France in protecting Poland against invasion by Germany or any other power.)

Neutrality Pledged

The other principal clauses, according to this source, will consist of a pledge to abstain from aggression against one another and a provision that one shall remain neutral in case the other is attacked by a third party.

The authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, recalled that Italy had concluded a treaty of friendship and nonaggression with Moscow in 1933, that this treaty was reinforced last February by a new economic agreement, and that Italy recently built for Russia the world's fastest naval cruiser.

Requisition of Ships

[An official decree published tonight laid down detailed regulations for requisitioning Italian merchant ships wherever they may be at the moment requisition is ordered, the United Press reported.

[The decree, first major development in the new situation created for this axis partner by Germany's nonaggression dealings with the Soviet Union, asserts that the object of requisition may be for purchase of a ship, its temporary use with or without its crew, or with any part of its crew.—Elitor's note.]

A large number of reserve officers, especially those of the medical corps, were reported summoned for service.

Slovaks Now Doubt 'Catastrophic' War

Bratislava, Slovakia, Aug. 22.—Ten thousand Slovak demonstrators, shouting for the return of territories from Poland, were told by Propaganda Minister Sano Mach tonight that "we are lucky to walk by the side of victorious Germany. No catastrophic war can occur because the balance of power is now so much in favor of the totalitarian countries."

Poland Must Choose Between War and Peace, Nazis Say, Increasing Pressure on Rumania

Nonaggression pact projected between Germany and Soviet Russia presages possible partition of Poland, which has been defying Germany on the Danzig question. It would be the fourth partition for Poland, territorial origins of which are shown on map main here idle while Russia and Germany, hitherto ideological enemies, consumated a vast shakeup in the European balance of power.

Soviet quarters, however, were emphatic in their insistence that the nonaggression agreement with Germany was entirely independent of any alliance that might be worked out with Britain and France and that the two proposed treaties were in no way incompatible.

[Soviets pointed out, the United Press said, that all nonaggression pacts which Russia has negotiated recently, including those with Finland and Poland, contain an escape clause providing that in event of aggression against any third power by either nation the pact becomes invalid.

[It is to be presumed, they added, that a similar provision would be contained in the pact with Germany.

[Thus, if Hitler committed aggression against Poland or any other third power, Russia might claim the right to attack Germany. —Editor's note]

These quarters expected the military staff talks to continue, but this view was directly contrary to that held in some foreign circles. British and French quarters kept secret their plans.

Servants busily dusted the huge former Austrian legation, making it ready for Von Ribbentrop. He will stay next door to the British military mission, which is quartered in Soviet government house.

Only a few officials, possibly Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff himself, were expected to lead the Russian side of the talks, which probably will be held in the Kremlin.

One of the chief causes of Soviet desire for the pact with Germany was said to be a belief that it would greatly strengthen her hand against Japan, ever potential Eastern foe and Germany's anti-comintern partner.

Diplomats, although startled by the pact announcement, belatedly attached increased significance to Joseph Stalin's speech before the Communist Party congress March 11.

In that speech he accused the British and French press of trying to "egg Germany" into marching into the Soviet Ukraine and of attempting to "poison the atmosphere" between Berlin and Moscow.

Poland "to Warsaw and beyond."—Editor's note.]

Troops Choke Highways

Troops continued today to pour eastward through the heart of Germany, choking highways and paralyzing ordinary traffic. Long troop trains have been leaving the provinces on their way to Berlin and beyond, and everywhere railroad stations are jammed with men in civilian clothes, who have been called up for service in the last two days.

In the capital itself, motorized forces have blocked streets on the edge of the city and Berlin's street buses have been commandeered for troop transport.

Streets, even in the center of Berlin, had today the calm and empty look they have on Sundays and there was a large decrease in private motor traffic. Some gasoline stations which were yesterday still selling small quantities, closed down altogether today. Others operated solely for the benefit of government and military customers.

Eggs and Meat Needed

Food difficulties have multiplied in the last two days with supplies of meat and eggs especially short.

At the same time there were rumors that Hitler was about to dispatch a special message giving Germany's conception of an ordered world peace to all governments of the world. This rumor could not be verified.

German official sources were emphatic in stating that all nonaggression pacts which Germany signs are of a nature that they are not directed against third parties. They left unanswered the question, however, whether a nonaggression pact may not ripen later into something closer, such as an alliance.

Possibilities of Pact

The mere fact of the agreement in principle on concluding a nonaggression agreement was regarded in German eyes as sufficient to do the following:

Make the Poles reconsider their unbending attitude.

Cause the British and French to think twice before following through their pledge to aid Poland if she considers her independence threatened and takes up arms.

Put a wholesale fear into Rumania, whose attitude has lately been called "strange" in the German press.

Keep Japan guessing. Japan is a member of the anticomintern pact with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Prepare the German public for the necessity of an about-face in its estimate of Soviet Russia.

Until the pact is actually signed, nobody in authority was willing to discuss either the history of the negotiations—for instance, who took the initiative—or the world-wide implications of the pact, beyond saying that it "marked a turning point in history."

Only Eight Men Knew

Only eight men, authoritative sources indicated, knew anything about the negotiations before the dramatic announcement last night.

In Moscow, Ambassador Count von der Schulenburg conducted the preliminary talks with Molotoff, with Joseph Stalin aware of every step.

In Berlin Russian Charge d'Affaires Astachoff ironed out further points with the foreign office secretary, Baron von Weitzsaecker, with Hitler and von Ribbentrop informed of every step, made in Moscow or Berlin.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, Hitler's axis partner, also was told about the pact.

Beyond that, nobody appeared to have known what was in the wind.

Some French citizens and their families residing in Berlin have left for France, it was learned today, but reports that the French Ambassador had requested French nationals to leave Germany were termed "very unlikely." Reliable French sources pointed out they had received no such request.

Many members of the British colony as well as many correspondents also have left or plan to do so today.

Little Nations Open Talks in Belgium Today

Neutrality Topic; Bid to Roosevelt for Collaboration Seen

By the Associated Press

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 22.—Foreign ministers of seven little nations gathered in Brussels tonight for a two-day discussion of how they can serve peace and —if war should come—how they may protect their countries' neutrality.

At the same time, two of the conferring powers—Belgium and the Netherlands — took steps to strengthen their defenses. Belgium cancelled all leaves for army officers and the Netherlands called back all coast and border troops on leave. Figures were not announced.

The official Dutch air line, KLM, today discontinued service on all domestic and seven foreign routes when most of its pilots were mobilized. Only London, Berlin, Paris and Stockholm service will be maintained.

Sweden in Key Role

Informal conversations in hotels and legations centered upon the situation in European politics created by Germany's announcement of nonaggression pact negotiations with Russia.

Rickard Sandler, Sweden's foreign minister, emerged as one of the dominating figures of the conference, opening at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Belgian Foreign Ministry.

Sources close to Sandler tonight said he held the opinion that discussions would center upon preservation of peace, and keeping politically aloof from Europe's opposing forces.

Switzerland Declines

[It was indicated, the United Press said, that the conference would draft a two-point peace program, providing for:

[An invitation to President Roosevelt and the heads of other American republics to collaborate with the neutral nations of Europe in seeking the use of all peaceful means to settle Europe's troubles.

[An appeal to the same nations to focus the attention of people throughout the world on the "inhuman phases" of war and try to prevent the slaughter of civilian populations if war should come.—Editor's note.]

Switzerland's decision to decline an invitation to participate in the conference with the "Oslo group"—Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Denmark, Finland, Sweden, and Norway—was announced tonight by the foreign ministry.

British Establish Munitions Supply Base in Canada

By International News Service

In a move to guarantee a steady source of munitions despite the shadow of war clouds, Great Britain has established a major munitions supply base in Canada, the Commerce Department disclosed yesterday.

The British war office has placed a contract for manufacture of an undetermined quantity of arms and munitions with Marine Industries, Ltd., at Sorel, Quebec, a report from the American commercial attaché at Ottawa revealed.

Washington military observers saw a double significance in the move: First, an apparent fear on the part of England that British home industries, vulnerable to bombing attacks, might be crippled; second, a quick about-face by the war office to contract for a foreign arms source, when it became apparent the United States, by failure of Congress to amend the neutrality act, could not be depended upon for munitions.

Caesarean Knife Removes Twin of 6-Week-Old Girl

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—A successful caesarian operation upon a six-week-old girl was announced today by the Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital.

British medical records showed only two similar cases, the most recent in 1814.

Hospital authorities said the girl was discharged in good health. The second baby, incapable of life, weighed two pounds.

(Scietnific sources said the baby removed by the operation was a twin who had failed to develop properly. Twins of this sort, one growing inside the body of the other, are uncommon but well known in medical literature, they said. These buried twins do not as a rule reach full development.)

$500,000,000 Farm Fund Spent

By The Associated Press

Accountants under Secretary Wallace reported yesterday they had spent or obligated all except $722 of the $500,000,000 Congress provided for farm benefit payments under the 1938 crop-control program.

The bulky breakdown on agricultural conservation payments listed $447,130,835 as actual payments to farmers and their county associations.

Administrative expenses of the AAA amounted to more than $13,500,000, or about 3 per cent of the total. The AAA said it used $23,200,000 for removal of farm surpluses, $4,000,000 to establish regional laboratories and develop new uses and markets for farm products, $5,800,000 for advance payments on the 1939 program for seed, lime and fertilizer, and $6,000,000 for advances to county farmer committees for administering the 1939 program.

New Strauss Waltz at Concert Tonight

Kindler to Direct 'Paroxysms' in Final Watergate Program

By Scott Hart

Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, nearly leaped from his chair during an interview yesterday. And the point is that the sun was shining.

"It is raining!" cried the maestro with a look of alarm, in a quick transition from the serenity of "Wo die Citronen Bluh'n"—which he was discussing—to the weather, the possibilities of which he was fearing.

But what the doctor had experienced was some illusory trick of the eye, elaborated, possibly, by the fears that falling weather may interrupt his appearance tonight at the last Water-Gate concert of the season.

For Dr. Kindler is excited. A great Strauss waltz, "Paroxysmen," or "Paroxysms"—a composition he thinks is as great as "The Blue Danube" and which never has been played publicly in this country—accounts for his expectations from the concert tonight.

"It is great," said the maestro. "It is marvelous. It is very Russian." It has never been recognized in America, and is little known to music lovers generally.

"It is Raining!" cried the maestro, breaking off suddenly from a discussion of "Wo die Citronen Bluh'n," a composition that will be included in his last concert of the season tonight. But there was no rain and Dr. Hans Kindler continued to the subject of Strauss

Russian Number First Performed In Vienna in 1847

A trip Strauss made to Italy in 1874 resulted in "Wo die Citronen Bluh'n" (The Land of the Citron Blossoms, or, literally, The Land Where the Lemons Bloom). This, a set of three waltzes with introduction and coda, is scheduled for the orchestra tonight.

Then . . . the season has been fine, and there possibly will be more opera next year, some pantomime or ballet, perhaps . . . and Gilbert and Sullivan had better wait until it can be properly put on . . . the barge makes an admirable stage, and "I have about lived down my reputation as a rainmaker."

Secluding himself almost, Dr. Kindler watches the weather and awaits tonight, when a new Strauss comes from the portfolio and the final concert of the series comes to the barge. As soloist, Dr. Kindler has chosen Lura Stover, a young and gifted American soprano. It is her first appearance in Washington.

Louisiana's Long Trail

The trail of corruption being uncovered in Louisiana by Federal authorities is proving to be a long, long trail, with ramifications leading into many parts of the State.

Almost forgotten now, in view of the more spectacular developments that have occurred since the story broke, is the sensational case of Dr. James Monroe Smith, which blew off the lid covering the Louisiana mess. Dr. Smith was indicted on a charge of embezzlement of funds entrusted to him while he was president of the State University. His further indictment Monday, on charges of income tax evasion, received only passing mention. The Federal dragnet has been hauling up much bigger fish than he out of the political mire of the Pelican State.

Indeed, with the sole exception of Mayor Robert Maestri, of New Orleans, all of the late Huey Long's best known lieutenants are now under indictment on one charge or other. Former Gov. Richard W. Leche and Seymour Weiss face charges arising out of alleged violations of the Connally "hot oil" act. And now Abe Shushan, whom Long made president of the New Orleans Levee Board, is charged with having used the mails to defraud.

Thus hardly a day goes by without new disclosures of how a State and its people have been mulcted by a grasping and conscienceless gang of political freebooters. One reason why they managed to operate with impunity for so long was furnished by Dr. A. J. Shaw, head of the minerals division of the conservation department, who committed suicide rather than face the music. In his testimony at Dallas recently, Shaw told of having signed an order increasing production from wells in the Rodessa oil fields of northern Louisiana. Asked why he did so, he said that he "signed anything they put before me—anything except an order to hang me."

It is apparent that he was just the kind of complacent official that crooked politicians would find very convenient to have in the State Conservation Department. Louisiana's oil resources are said to be considerable and largely untapped. The temptation to get the oil out of the ground and ship it across the State line, in violation of the Connally act, was great because of the large profits involved. But hot oil was only one of what now appear to have been many sources of lucrative graft for those in the Pelican State who used politics as a means of acquiring pelf.

Brooklyn Dodger

A couple of years ago the whimsical Mr. Monroe Leaf wrote a pleasant little picture book which he modestly hoped would please the kiddies. It was—we hardly need remind you—about a bull who seemed suffering from a fairly advanced case of schizophrenia. Concerning what kind of reception the book got from the young folks we are not advised. But for some reason, maybe sunspots, its success with the grown-ups was instant and enormous. Men who had no taste for flowers and whose only interest in cork trees was to get rid of their product as rapidly as possible could be observed in Pullman smokers chortling over the book until tears streamed from their eyes. Base runners who happened to think of the story as they were taking a lead off the bag became so doubled up with mirth the pitchers, unless they happened to think of it themselves, could throw them out with the greatest ease. Burglars who were tempted to peep into the book when they discovered it in the houses they were robbing, howled and howled with laughter until the policeman on the beat came to admonish them about keeping more quiet that time of night.

And yet, when the story came true at the New York World's Fair, it attracted very little attention. Last Sunday Mr. Sidney Franklin, the famous Brooklyn matador, was demonstrating to a group of officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals how refined, esthetic and non-sadistic bullfighting can be when you don't hurt the bull and when you call the sport "bull-dodging."

However, the bull, Chamaco, was very bellicose at first. He snorted, lowered his head and charged furiously at Mr. Franklin. Mr. Franklin got out of the way very politely, and very gracefully and without getting so much as a fleck of dust on his strawberry-and-cream traje de luces or on the pompons of his pumps. Chamaco tried it again with the same result. And he was in the act of charging a third time when he gave up in disgust.

"Whoever let that guy in here," Chamaco was probably thinking. "Here all these poor people have come out to see me make hash of that fellow with my horns and he just won't stand up and take it. All he wants to do is dress up in a pretty suit and dance."

Developing Challenge

For those who study the underlying currents, rather than the surface agitation, there is no element of surprise in the non-aggression pact now being concluded between Germany and Russia. Over a period of many months the Nazi and Communist dictatorships, fundamentally similar in their political and economic philosophy, have been steadily drawing closer together. Their superficial hostility has indeed deceived a few befuddled radicals whose labored efforts to explain Moscow's present policy are not unamusing. But the great majority of Americans are properly more apprehensive than confused over the present turn of events.

The reasons for apprehension are very real, even though the risk of immediate hostilities may well have been lessened by what is taking place. With Russia resolved upon neutrality, the Anglo-French effort to build an eastern front against continued German aggression is largely frustrated. If Poland should elect to fight rather than compromise on the Danzig issue, resistance would have to be carried on without any immediate outside help. With Russia neutral, geographical factors alone preclude any effective Anglo-French aid to Poland. It needs no more than a glance at the map to bring home the latter country's terribly exposed position.

In this second Munich it is Russia which, for reasons of her own, has capitulated to German pressure. Those reasons will in time become more clear. It may be that military weakness, which was so large a factor in the Anglo-French surrender on the issue of Czecho-Slovakia, played a dominant role. It may be that Moscow very reasonably anticipates that this accord with Germany will strengthen Russia's position in the Far East. It may even be that certain territorial adjustments in Europe, to Russia's advantage, are envisaged. Whatever the reasons, Russia has made terms with Germany in much the same way that Great Britain and France did last September.

The last agreement of this sort with Germany was at the expense of Czecho-Slovakia. This one, it is all too probable, will be paid for by Poland. But it does not follow that the German pressure will immediately be exerted to Poland's destruction. Such tactics would force France and Great Britain into war, and would therefore be a diplomatic blunder which Hitler, even in the full flush of his present success, is quite shrewd enough to avoid. He has time on his side, and one may anticipate that the Fuehrer's forthcoming demand will be very cleverly designed to weaken Poland fundamentally but at the same time to be superficially reasonable and even reassuring.

The threat of immediate war, assuming Hitler plays his cards with customary skill, may therefore be lessened. But the swing of the balance of power in Germany's favor, and the simultaneous decline in the influence of Great Britain and France, is emphasized by the very indications that war is less likely. The inability of the western democracies to control the course of events is as pronounced as the capacity of Germany to make herself, step by step, the completely dominant European power.

The significance of this steadily developing shift in the balance of power is the greater because of the ideas which dominate the ruling party in Germany, and the way in which the Nazis apply those ideas as their strength increases. A Nazi Germany confined to pre-war borders would of itself be a serious threat to countries with a democratic tradition. A Nazified Europe with its philosophy dominant from Madrid to Moscow is that much more serious. A Nazi empire, overshadowing Great Britain and France and making its influence effective in every quarter of the globe, is a development with which the United States will have to reckon.

What is happening in eastern Europe is seemingly remote from the United States. But it is not a drama unconnected with the fundamentals of American life. The developing concert of totalitarian powers which is threatened; the extending sway of dictatorships over a steadily increasing area, all this is a portent and a warning. No nation espousing democratic principles can pretend indifference to a trend which, for years now, has been moving steadily against continuation of democratic ideals.

So the turn of events in eastern Europe is revealed as something far more than a matter of indifference to this country. The issue, properly seen, is not the sovereignty of Danzig, the future status of the Polish corridor, not even the continued existence of Poland as an independent state. The onward march of party dictatorships, whether they call themselves Nazi, Fascist or Communist, is, as the dictators frankly assert, a menace to the very concept of democracy. The scope and character of that challenge—for America—grows steadily more clear.

The Impact On Japan

For some time Japan has been torn by a struggle between those favoring an outright alliance with the axis powers and those opposing such a move. That issue has now become academic. The impending German-Russian pact of non-aggression eliminates, for the time being, at least, the possibility of any joint German-Japanese attack on the Soviet Union. And Russia, secure on her western border, can now give increased attention to developments in the Far East and play a more active role there.

The German-Russian move, therefore, puts Japan on the spot and compels her to reorient her policies. Hitherto she has been able, even without a formal alliance, to capitalize the friendship of Germany and Italy. She has also been in a position to capitalize Russia's fear of a war on two fronts, the preoccupation of Great Britain and France with European developments and the reluctance of the United States to pursue a strong policy in the Far East.

These factors have made it possible for Japan to prosecute her undeclared war on China without danger of outside interference. It has also encouraged her to flout the rights and interests in China of the Western democracies in an obvious effort to eliminate them from the Far Eastern scene.

The situation has now undergone a radical change. For while the latest European developments undoubtedly tend to make Great Britain and France even weaker than they are, they also tend to isolate Japan. Germany no longer has any need of her. On the other hand, Russia has been given a relatively free hand in the Far East.

The Russian danger and the hope of sooner or later settling accounts with Moscow have loomed very large in the Japanese mind. A large number of Japan's best troops have been kept in Manchuria and Inner Mongolia against the day when they might be needed in a war with the Soviet Union. Japan must now reckon with the possibility, however, that Russia will be in a position to strengthen her Far Eastern garrisons and pursue a forward policy in the Far East.

This may compel Japan either to come to terms with Moscow or else increase her armed forces on the northern borders to the point where her lines in China would be dangerously weakened. It is not unlikely, therefore, that the German-Russian move will have a sobering effect on the Japanese, who have been riding high for a long time.

Real Public Service

As the last chapter in Waterbury's million-dollar scandal is being written, the whole country is familiar with the tale of corruption that has been unfolded. What is not so generally known is that this clean-up was effected largely through the persistent efforts of two newspapers.

Eight years before Mayor T. Frank Hayes was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the city, and sent to prison for 10 to 15 years, the Waterbury Republican and The American, owned by William J. Pape, had conducted a campaign against municipal irregularities and graft. These papers disclosed that a city employe was building a home chiefly from city-owned materials; that contracts were being let without competitive bidding; that the city street department hired hundreds of employes just before election day and dismissed them when the votes were in, and that the police and fire departments had been purged of all who were not in sympathy with the Hayes machine.

In 1937 a controller opposed to the machine was elected with the aid of these two papers. Soon after he took office The Republican and The American began publishing series of startling articles exposing the corruption of the municipal government. It was these stories which led to a grand jury investigation and exposure of the conspiracy to defraud Waterbury of more than $1,000,000 over a period of eight years.

The grand jury found that "corruption and mismanagement were the rule rather than the exception" under the Hayes regime. Yet the colossal fraud for which 22 officials, politicians, contractors, lobbyists and others have now been sentenced to pay fines or serve prison terms probably would not have been uncovered, except for the vigilance of the Waterbury press. As recently as 1937 Mayor Hayes was re-elected. Had the press of that city been less courageous or less public-spirited, he might have gone on indefinitely swindling the people and concealing his crime.

New York, Kansas City and various other American cities can testify that it is not an easy task to free a local government from the clutches of corrupt bossism. For their persistence and final success in that effort Mr. Pape's two papers at Waterbury are entitled to high commendation. In a very direct way they have strengthened the traditional devotion of the American press to the public welfare.

"Social" Security

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Social security is a new and long-overdue term in our vocabulary. It is usually translated to mean economic security. But why not use it at its full value? True, one who is economically secure is more likely to be socially secure, but not necessarily so. In these days of small families, one-room apartments and much travel and shifting about one may have enough money on which to exist and still be very far from being socially secure.

The country is full of kindly maiden ladies, widows and even bachelors, who have, perhaps, given of themselves as well as their funds to help others and who in their later years find themselves without the "social security" they have made possible to others or who for other reasons are virtually alone in the world. A pittance on which to exist is far from filling their needs.

Following the Greenbelt experiment, why should not the Government introduce the "Social Security Hotel," a place into which such souls can be fitted according to their means, where they can maintain some kind of status in life and yet live somewhat en famille, where a friendly management will adjust their accommodations according to their means and where some light employment may be taken in part payment when necessary. Such arrangements are provided in boarding school, and if "life is a school" why not carry out similar arrangements later on in life when it is even more urgently needed? It's time we made possible real social security.

Thanksgiving Day

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to Mrs. Daskam's letter recently appearing in your paper, may I offer the suggestion that Thanksgiving Day was not established for the purpose of giving Government clerks another "day off." After all, they do not constitute the major citizenry of the United States.

Originating in a past when mere existence was a triumph of courage and good fortune, sanctified by formal establishment at the time of our country's greatest crisis, as a present expression of our gratitude at finding ourselves citizens of a country still of free speech and habit, it would behoove us to be more thoughtful of the significance of the day than to strain ourselves to obtain more "time off" from the work of a Government that not only pays but protects us.

Ignorance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I regard The Post as an estimable paper—publishing always reliable news and facts—of whatever nature they may be, but I am most surprised at the printing of such an article as appeared in this paper on August 13 signed Turner Rose.

It is not only a misrepresentation and an insult to a section of our country, but reveals a flagrant ignorance of the subject matter.

Russia's Position In China

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Henry H. Douglas in his letter of August 10 makes some statements which are open to question. What evidence is there that "The U. S. S. R. is working in the interests of peace"? The U. S. S. R. is at the root of China's trouble. Ever since Borodin was sent into China in 1924 China has been in ferment. He organized the movements against Great Britain which isolated Hongkong from the hinterland; he led the Chinese mob which invaded the British Concession at Hankow and forced the British to move out; he placarded China with anti-foreign posters; he helped drive out our own and British missionaries. Was all this in the interest of peace?

It is a grand picture which Mr. Douglas draws of a China "politically independent of all countries, including Russia." It will, however, take more than a "minimum of decent co-operation" from us to bring this about. It will mean intervention and nothing less. It will mean vast sums of money and millions of American lives. China can never stand alone. She has always leaned first on one strong power and then on another.

It is China's hope to bring about a Russo-Japanese conflict and thus be rid of both her would-be conquerors so that she may continue her own "way of life." There is nothing in present day China that indicates that that "way of life" will differ in any essential respect from her past, a past of turmoil, disorder and bloodshed that has been a constant menace to the world.

Mr. Douglas gives no basis for his opinion that "our future trade with a victorious Japan will be even smaller" than our trade with Russia. As a matter of fact, our trade with Manchukuo since its separation from China has shown a marked increase. A victorious Japan would supply the one essential under which the Chinese have always flourished—order and good government. Look at the Chinese in the Philippines, in British Malaya, the Netherlands Indies, Siam, under orderly governments. They are hard working, conscientious and prosperous. Our trade with them accounts for much of our very considerable trade with all these countries. A victorious Japan in China will need all of the things we are best equipped to provide—automotive, aeronautical and railroad equipment, factory machinery, raw cotton, mining machinery, iron and steel, petroleum. She will need these because neither she nor China has them, and they are essential for the sort of order China needs. A victorious Russia in China will need few of these things. Russia does not need to develop China's resources—she has plenty of her own. Under a victorious Russia, China would sink into agricultural serfdom.

For 13 years preceding July 8, 1937, Russia has been boring from within China. Russia wants an outlet in the Pacific. Japan stands in her way. Her objective is political, Japan's is economic. Russia is no friend of democracy. She has assumed the cloak of democracy in order to hoodwink the British, the French and ourselves. The British are not undertaking to help Russia in Asia. They are seeking Russia's help in Europe.

The British do not seek to interfere with Japan in China, but they would be delighted if we would do so. Our intervention in the Far Eastern dispute might satisfy Russia and constitute the price of Russian support in Europe. We are again being made the pawns of European diplomacy. We shall help defeat Japan in China so that Russia may have a free hand in China. That is Russia's price for any aid she may give Britain against the axis.

I should like to believe all the things Mr. Douglas seems to believe. I wish China were able to stand on her own feet. I wish Chiang Kai-shek would again take a stand against communism so that Japan could withdraw from her single-handed struggle against it in Asia and join with China in keeping Stalin from the Pacific. I wish Great Britain did not have to stoop to conquer, and I wish we would mind our own business.

War Debts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of yesterday there appeared an item from Stockholm indicating Secretary Morgenthau's intention of proceeding to Finland to tender thanks for her prompt payment of installments on what are generally miscalled "war debts," though in reality payments on account of credits granted by the United States for "the most part for purchases of foodstuffs from the United States," total purchases of such by Finland from 1917 to 1930, "for a total of $36,209,564.24," the portion of which Finland was to give bonds being $9,000,000, "after allowing for cash payments made or to be made by Finland." The sentences quoted above are from "Combined Annual Reports of Debt Commission," 1922-6.

It would be of public interest if Mr. Morgenthau on his return to Washington were to explain the mechanics by which Finland or any other foreign nation can alone make payments in the currency of the creditor nation. As I see it, it so happens that the United States is a willing buyer of certain Finnish products that are not rendered impracticable by the tariff or other handicaps. For many years, on the other hand, Finland has not been desirous of buying American products within an average of 70 per cent of the value of what she sells here, consequently she has a large balance in her favor, out of which there is no burden in transferring to the United States Treasury the small amount of annual installments in accord with the act of Congress, and the agreement made with Finland March 12, 1924.

If the great "war debtors," with bonds of the value of about $10,000,000,000, without the addition of interest, were permitted to gather credit balances here by shipping goods to the value of 70 per cent more than annual purchases made by them of American products, they, too, would have balances here in their favor out of which transfers could be made to the United States Treasury in the same way as Finland.

But while she has by this means paid about $5,000,000 on her debt of $9,000,000, payments for war debts would need to be a thousand-fold, in view of the fact of the war debts being more than a thousand times that of Finland's. Great Britain has paid 2,034 millions (over two billions) on her war debt (against Finland's $5,000,000 of "relief and reconstruction debt"), yet still retains her historic rating as the largest customer of her former debtor; yet she receives no thanks. Nor does the tariff give her the opportunity to pay about $5,000,000,000 of debt in the same way as Finland pays $5,000,000. CHARLES McCLURE.

Material Values

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If war breaks out it spells the end of civilization. No one can read "Mein Kampf" with understanding and not be driven to this conclusion, and any responsible official or public man who is not familiar with this book is unworthy of his office. To avert this war no sacrifice of ours can be too great. We simply cannot permit barbarism to sweep humanity from this globe without exerting our last ounce of strength to prevent it.

The situation today is largely due to technological progress having outdistanced moral progress. Mankind is doomed to dark age of mere animal existence if this trend is not reversed. There is no happiness in animal existence and we should proclaim this fact from the housetops.

All nations are equally guilty in this respect and an open admission of our own guilt would go far toward restoring sanity in the world.

Gus

GUS IS A DOG. So far, I speak with absolute certainty that I am telling the truth. Were I to go further and attempt or pretend to specify the breed, I should be consciously groping. He is a symposium, an open forum, of dog blood. Any attempt to assemble his various family trees would create a veritable canine forest. More nearly than any other, he resembles the German shepherd. But even at that the remoteness of his resemblance to the police breed would admit him to nothing better than the secret service.

In his puppyhood the cartilage of one ear was broken, so one of his ears is starched and the other negligee. He is totally incapable of looking more than halfway astonished.

He had been mistreated by somebody early in his life. When found by his potential master he was ill and lame. He looked as if all heart and hope had been crushed. The man was trying to sell oil-burners then (he has since become gainfully employed) and he noticed the dog lying down looking sick. He petted the dog—he will pet any dog. The lady of the house asked him if he would like to have the animal. Would he! The man took him to his home, fed him, doctored him, loved him. Gus became a real dog. His coat sleekened, his eyes sparkled, his one good ear stood erect, he played, and was happy. And does he love that master!

But Gus had lived before his present time on earth; or else some of his myriad assortment of ancestors had been well educated and had bequeathed actual knowledge to the dog. For I believe both dogs and human beings are born with latent knowledge that needs only development and organization. The first time—after his new master and he had each other for a year or more—he was told to "speak" for a bite of food, He "spoke" as promptly as if he had been trained to it all his life. Even if, merely in his presence, some one says, "I wonder if Gus wants this piece of meat badly enough to speak for it," Gus vocally registers willingness, at once.

And his forebears had evidently been guardians of people. For Gus does this instinctively, without having been taught. Particularly is he burdened with a feeling of responsibility for children unaccompanied by adults. Whenever children in the neighborhood are playing, Gus goes to where they are and stays among them. And one day when little tousle-topped, toddling, 2-year-old Tommy strayed down past Gus' house, the dog noted that no one was with the little fellow. So he got up from his own top step, where he had been lying, and went to where Tommy was.

Not only is Gus loyal to his master and mistress and to the children of the neighborhood—he also has a keen sense of responsibility for the family car. One day when his master had stopped at a garage to pick up a mechanic who was to bring the owner home and then take the car to be repaired, Gus witnessed their arrival and welcomed his master with the usual transports of joy. But when the mechanic remained in the car and started to drive away, Gus gave a startled look at the car, then at his master. His looks plainly said:

"Have you gone completely screwball, boss? Don't you see that guy is taking your car?"

His master making no move to recapture the vehicle, Gus started full tilt after it. Call as he might, his master could not get him to come back. Lickety-split he went across lots to head off the car. Thus he went out of sight. Nor did he appear until the car repair job was done and the mechanic returned. There Gus was, in his regular back-seat place. The workman said the dog had reached the garage by the time he did, and, as soon as the door was opened, went inside and stayed there.

Gus is the sort of dog that could worry. He is a fool about ball-playing and squirrels and delivery wagons. But I believe he actually does worry now and then. Yet his worry, if any, is always for the other fellow. For instance, when his master and his perennially youthful mother were scuffling in pretended earnest, at the latter's apartment one night, Gus thought the thing was going too far. He felt that the battle was serious; that there was anger and violence in progress. First he leaped upon them and barked viciously—he has a growl and a bark that would petrify anybody who didn't know the gentleness of his heart. The barking did no good—it seemed only to aggravate the trouble. The wrestling and scrimmaging redoubled in energy. Then, having given up hope of stopping them by his reasonable remonstrances, Gus went out into the dark entrance hall and returned bringing in his mouth his master's hat. This he poked into its owner's face.

"Cut out this roughhouse, and come home!"

Gus is allergic to two fuzzy white Spitz dogs next door, but only when they are in their back garden and he in his. There they and he yip and roar through the picket fence at each other, until hearers would think something or somebody was about to be torn limb from limb. They caninely curse each other to the nethermost pit! They call names. But when the same dogs meet out in the front yard—all is peace and playfulness. For some exclusively dog reason, non-understandable to humans, place is "of the essence" in their relations with one another.

Laborers who come to the place are afraid when they see Gus looking at them. He can look death and destruction. If they hear that basso profundo bark of his, cold chills run over them. He is to them "the Hound of the Baskervilles." One man delivering garden stuff said, as he stood at the back gate:

"Wha' 'bout dat dawg?"

"He won't hurt you."

"You said it! He ain' nev' go' hurt me!"

And he refused to come in to deliver a bale of peat until Gus was shut into the house.

That is Gus. Gus is just a dog; but if anybody believes Gus hasn't a close approximation of a mind and a soul—well, the person who thinks and says that, in my presence, had better be under 50 years old and weigh less than 185 pounds.

Fair Enough

Censorship

LET ME substitute a newspaper publisher for Henry Ford in the Labor Board case in which Ford is ordered to refrain from disparaging or criticizing labor unions and I will show you where this confused and arrogant nest of professional boss-baiters claims a right—indeed, even a duty—to censor any newspaper in the United States, and in conceivable circumstances, to censor them all at once. Just admit that a publisher in the same situation could be ordered to print neither news nor opinion which, in the board's own judgment, disparaged or criticized unions in general or any particular union and you make my case for me. Disparagement and criticism are among the principal products of the American Nation, and Ford is better than a crude hand at such activity himself. He in turn, however, has been disparaged and criticized by experts, including some Muscovite revolutionists whom the Labor Board now holds immune from counter-battery work by the Ford politico-editorial department.

The right of the press to disparage and criticize is no more sacred than Mr. Ford's, but it would point up the case to imagine the defendant in these proceedings as a newspaper publisher rather than a manufacturer. I want to show that this order is an act of censorship and for that purpose will assume that the Daily Bugle has been having a controversy with certain individuals who, by methods not necessarily straightforward, have caused themselves to be selected as the bargaining agents for the Bugle's staff.

Counterattack Impossible

DEMANDS ARE discussed and the management makes certain concessions, but refuses to go further, whereupon the unioneers, in speeches and in handbills and pamphlets, disparage and criticize the Bugle. Some of this matter is truthful, for it is not beyond imagining that the management has some faults, but if the case be typical it must be allowed that much of it is twisted or false and in spots, scurrilous. Regardless of whether a strike ensues, the unioneers determine to beat the publisher into submission by denouncing him as an enemy of labor and by union enactments binding all members of this union and its Nation-wide family of affiliates to boycott not only the paper itself but all products advertised therein.

The publisher claims that he is not an enemy of labor and wants to present his side of the dispute and repeat in print, short of libel and obscenity, the matter which has been uttered under union auspices against himself and his executives and those employes who preferred not to join the union. He wants to repeat this matter by way of showing the tactics which are used by the other side and to prepare the ground for an effort to refute. Accordingly, he prepares news reports in which he interviews himself and editorials weighing the arguments.

The Labor Board then, in consistency with its order to Henry Ford and the concept of its duty revealed in that order, cites him for attempting to intimidate the help and commands him to print nothing more about it—with the generous concession, however, that he may print the union's case including total falsehoods and personal attacks. If he attempts to answer the personal attacks with counter-attacks on the methods, morals and personal history of those who are conducting the campaign against him, he is guilty of violating labor's right to organize by sowing suspicion of their leaders among the rank and file.

Only Resort Is Blank Space

SO THE BEST the Daily Bugle can do is come out with a couple of blank columns in the news section and another in the editorial zone, with a little line over each reporting that this is where the Bugle would have told the public its own version of the facts and its own opinion of the controversy if the Labor Relations Board had been so kind.

Henry Ford's offense was that he presented to Ford employes his side of a dispute with the organizers of the C. I. O. Automobile Union, and gratuitously added his own opinion that it was inadvisable for the men to join. But, just as a published opinion, that document was not binding on the Ford employes. If Ford took further steps to make it binding, those steps, not the published opinion, would have constituted intimidation or interference. I do not assume that Mr. Ford told the truth entirely and without bias, and, quite aside from the fact that unioneers frequently bruise the truth and boast of their bias and bile, I hold that he still has an equal right to speak or print his piece, subject to the ordinary penalties, which are disproof and discredit for misrepresentation and financial loss and imprisonment for libel.

Imagination need not strain to conceive a case in which the board might order the entire American press to suppress news and comment unfavorable to the union side in a fight involving a national organization with a local in every shop, lest members of these locals feel themselves coerced by their respective publishers.

Arms Expenditures Stimulate Germans' Fear of Inflation

Special Correspondence of The Post

Berlin.

IN A TRAIN bound from Munich to the Bavarian Alps a party of Germans were expatiating to us upon the achievements of the Nazi regime. They pointed with pride to new factories on the outskirts of Munich and to a brand new "autobahn" leading in the direction of Berchtesgaden. Their confidence appeared to be boundless.

The conversation turned to the cost of living in Germany. For us, we explained, living was cheap enough. The marks which we had bought in London had cost only 40 per cent of the official rate; quoted at 12 marks to the pound. We had in fact bought them at a rate of 30.50 marks to the pound.

The reaction of our hearers to this piece of information was remarkable. In a moment their self-confidence had left them, and had been replaced by a look of anxiety. They were old enough to remember the inflation of the post-war years. They remembered the days when a loaf of bread cost millions of marks, and when the salary of a university professor for a month was worth, in terms of foreign currency, $1.20.

Fear of inflation is widespread today, and it is stimulated by the knowledge of the government's reckless expenditure on armaments, public buildings and propaganda. The people of Berlin looked at the miles of gilded wooden columns set up in honor of Hitler's fiftieth birthday and they asked themselves: "Where does the money come from?"

THERE ARE, indeed, grounds enough for this fear of inflation. For the combination of a highly developed boom concentrated upon the production goods industries and a shortage of commodities is a condition which contains all the elements of a full-blooded inflation.

In a free economy this danger would arise in the following manner: The boom in production goods industries would cause higher wages to be paid to the workers in those industries; higher incomes in the hands of consumers competing to buy a limited supply of commodities would lead to an inflationary rise in prices; with every possibility that the currency would ultimately lose all value.

To guard against this dual danger the Nazi government has instituted a system of price and wage controls, and on the effective functioning of these controls depends the whole future of the Nazi economy.

CONTROL of prices is effected by the price stop decree of November 26, 1936, which provides that, with few exceptions, prices shall not rise above the level which prevailed on October 17 of that year. Some modifications of the system take place in practice, by appeal to the price commissar, but the price stop remains a powerful weapon against any inflationary upward movement of prices.

Meanwhile, in 1938, Field Marshal Goering, in his capacity as director of the four-year plan, generalized the supervision of wage increases, by his "wage decree" whereby any proposed increase of wages must be submitted to the approval of "labor trustees," charged with the task of preventing any competitive bidding up of the price of labor.

Thus one of the most important indications of the stability of the Nazi economy is afforded by evidence of the success or failure of the attempt to prevent inflation by the control of prices and incomes.

It is not difficult to find evidence that there have been certain evasions of the price control. In a village in the Bavarian Alps fruit and vegetables were being sold at exorbitant prices, four or five times as great as those ruling in the towns.

It is common knowledge that in Berlin "black markets" have developed for certain of the scarcer commodities, and that it is possible to buy coffee in a back room which would be unobtainable over the counter—provided that one is prepared to pay a higher price. Indeed, with prices fixed and supplies drastically reduced, it would be exceedingly difficult for the small shopkeeper to make two ends meet if he did not occasionally take the risk involved in an illegal transaction.

Rents, too, are fixed at the 1936 level, but in fact, with the steady demolition of old flats, the price of flats in new buildings, where no such criterion is available, have tended to be far above the previous level.

YET, when all this has been said, it is nevertheless true that there has been no general rise in prices. A study of the housekeeping books of a Vienna "hausfrau," who has carefully noted the prices of commodities over the past 18 months, shows that there has been scarcely any change.

In most shops lists are displayed indicating the approved prices for goods on sale, and it is easy to check the actual prices charged against these lists. Moreover, the penalties for infringements of the decree are a serious discouragement to profiteering.

The increasing labor shortage which has resulted from the present boom, and which is now one of the principal problems facing the Nazi economy, has made necessary a considerable tightening-up of the control of wages. No change can be made in respect of wages or conditions without reference to the labor trustees; wage increases are ruled out, and it is even impossible for a workman to leave his employment in search of a better position. It is also impossible for an employer to take on fresh labor without permission from the labor office.

THIS SYSTEM of control appears, from all accounts, to be functioning most effectively; it has minimized labor transfers and effective competition for labor between employers. It has not, however, eliminated concealed wage increases or competition for new labor coming into the market.

Cases of payment by the employer of the compulsory party contributions, and even of taxes—both of which are normally deducted from the wages of the workmen—are on the increase. Many firms have taken to supplying their employes with meals considerably below cost price, and to providing them with free holidays in the country and other amenities. Moreover, many industries are working overtime, and overtime is paid at a rate of 25 per cent above normal wage rates.

Thus the total spending power has increased to a degree which is imposing a further strain on the wage level, and this pressure, a source of potential inflation, represents one of the weak spots in the Nazi economic system, and one which must become weaker with the progress of the present boom.

There is abundant evidence that both the price and the wage control are being subjected to a considerable, and probably an increasing, strain. Evasions of the system are constantly reported, despite the stringent penalties by which it is enforced. Yet there does not, at present, appear to be any evidence to suggest the imminence of a total breakdown or of the inflation which a breakdown would involve.

auditoriums because it was "attacking communism."

This statement was challenged by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, who said that "I live in that community and know that isn't true. The reason you couldn't get a hall was not because you were attacking communism, but because you were attacking the Jews."

Also active in promoting the "anti-Communist federation," he said, were Mrs. W. K. Jewett and Conrad Chapman, described as associates of Mrs. Fry. Although bund leaders helped organize it, he said the bund accepted a "business proposition" that no swastikas be displayed and no uniforms be worn.

Leaders of political and what he termed "patriotic" organizations, similar to the Silver Shirts in their anti-Semitic aims, were invited, Allen said. About 200 attended. Among those present, he said, were Herman Schwinn, leader of the West Coast German-American bund movement; Kenneth Alexander, Southern California Silver Shirt leader; Charles B. Hudson, of Omaha, publisher of "America in Danger;" James H. Peyton, of the American Rangers, and William Kullgren, editor of Beacon Light.

Publications of Nazi Germany's World Service and writings of the Rev. Gerald Winrod, of Wichita, Kans.; George Deatherage, leader of the Knights of the White Camellia; James True, Washington publisher of Industrial Control Reports, and Robert Edmonston, of Stoddartsville, Pa., were distributed, he said.

On his trip East last January, Allen said he talked not only with officials of the German and Italian embassies but bore a letter from Schwinn to Fritz Kuhn, bund fuehrer. He said he called on Kuhn in New York and was invited to address a new Boston bund unit but rejected the invitation. He said he also called on Deatherage in West Virginia, Winrod in Kansas, and, in Chicago, on a Dr. Uznansky, whom he termed a leader of Chicago's Polish element.

The witness said he joined William Dudley Pelley's Silver Shirts in 1933. When Silver Shirt activities quieted down following a Congressional investigation, he said, he helped form the "American White Guard," a short-lived organization.

He declared he was commissioned in 1937 by Deatherage to contact the Associated Farmers of California and other West Coast organizations to enlist support "against our real enemy, the Jew behind communism." Nothing materialized, he said.

Allen at first told the committee he was not against all Jews, just against "Jewish communism."

"Why do you say Jewish communism?" asked Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey. "Earl Browder is not a Jew and he is the leader of communism here."

Admits Anti-Semitism

"Communism is Jewish," said Allen. "Browder is a leader, but he is not the leader."

"As a matter of fact, you are anti-Jewish, aren't you?" asked Dies.

"Personally, I am," said Allen.

When Allen asserted Jews are in control of the Soviet government, Dies retorted:

"I suppose that's the reason why Germany and Russia are getting together right now?" Spectators laughed and Allen did not reply.

Voorhis once asked, "Where can the Jewish people go?"

"There is a large island off the coast of Africa called Madagascar," Allen replied.

Republicans May Delay Convention In Strategy Move

Republicans may try a waiting game to reverse custom and force Democrats to nominate their 1940 Presidential candidate first.

With the exception of 1888, the Democrats have enjoyed the strategic advantage of holding their quadrennial convention after the Republicans had written their platform and chosen their national ticket.

Some Republican leaders said yesterday Chairman Hamilton of the National Committee might seek to delay selection of a convention date until after the Democrats have fixed theirs. They explained that by holding their convention last, Republicans could take more effective advantage of any dissension among Democrats.

TVA Will Double Output at Dam

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 22 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Authority announced today award of contracts totaling $2,000,000, to double the power output of Wheeler Dam in northern Alabama.

Two 32,400-kilowatt generating units will be installed. These, with two similar units already at the dam, will provide a power capacity of 129,600 kilowatts.

Two contracts for river channel improvement at Pickwick Landing and Guntersville Dam projects also were let.

Contract Let On Barter Cotton

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday delivery of 675,000 to 700,000 bales of Government-held cotton to Great Britain under the cotton-for-rubber exchange agreement was to be completed within approximately six months.

This was disclosed in awarding a contract for sampling and classing the barter cotton to Manget Brothers Co., which has principal offices at Newnan, Ga.

Both countries have agreed to hold the commodities as reserves for use in time of war or similar emergency.

1917 And Now

By Ernest K. Lindley

Factors The Same

THE COMMENT in this column last week about the causes of our entry into the World War has elicited several very interesting comments. (I mean the World War of 1914-18, it may soon be necessary to specify.) The differences of opinion on the subject seem to be as diverse as they ever were.

One reader has referred me to an excellent short analysis by Stanley K. Hornbeck, an experienced diplomat and student of international affairs who is now adviser on political relations to the Secretary of State. (Mr. Hornbeck's article, entitled "Cause and Occasion of Our Entry into the World War (1917)," is published in the "Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science," Philadelphia, July, 1937).

Mr. Hornbeck draws a distinction between the "occasion" of our entry into the World War, which was the submarine controversy, and the "causes" of that fateful decision. He brings out the conflict in the mind of Woodrow Wilson between the determination to keep his country out of the European holocaust and the "desire to champion what he conceived to be the rights and interests of his own country and an outraged world." Mr. Hornbeck thinks that this mental conflict was not resolved in favor of war until Wilson became convinced that "the German government meant to stop at nothing, and that a victory by the central powers over the allies was inconceivable."

"The underlying cause," he writes, "was the conviction, long resisted but ultimately arrived at, by President Wilson, and prevalent among his principal advisers, that both the objectives and the methods of the belligerent autocracies were a real menace to the peace and security of democratic countries and democratic institutions everywhere."

Factors Which Led U. S. Into War

HE QUOTES approvingly Lord Grey's comment that in the United States "there was probably a widespread consciousness or subconsciousness that a German victory would mean a Prussianized Europe, and that this would be inimical to American ideals of world polity."

In harmony with this theme he suggests that the more important factors which led to war were:

"Our concepts of morality, legality, justice and human values."

"The feeling that Germany was the aggressor."

"A natural ranging of sympathies on the side of the allies."

"A gradually developed perception that the ideas, ideology and political objectives of the German government were antipathetic of ours."

"A conclusion that a 'peace without victory' could not be brought about."

"Fear that the allies would be beaten."

"An informed, intelligent and practical facing of the question, 'eventually, why not now?'"

So, Mr. Hornbeck concludes, we went into the war "in defense of the United States and all of its interests (paramount among which was its right to exist, in security, as a sovereign and independent democratic state), in defense of principles and institutions in which the people of this country believed along with and in common with the peoples of the principal other powers with which, as belligerents, we then became associated."

Now, more than 22 years later, every underlying cause and compelling factor cited by Mr. Hornbeck is again present and will make itself felt if another general war breaks out in Europe. A possible exception at the outset is a vivid fear that the British and French will be beaten. If it should become evident that they are about to be defeated Mr. Hornbeck's list would be complete.

German Ideas Antipathetic

WE HAVE OUR concepts of morality, legality, justice and human values. We have already marked Germany as the aggressor, and our sympathies are already ranged far more solidly on the side of the allies than in April, 1917. We can see that the ideas and political objectives of the Germans are antipathetic to ours, far more so than in 1917. We can feel reasonably certain that this war, if it is fought, will be fought to its finish—which may be the destruction of Europe.

The "eventually, why not now?" feeling is corollary of a vivid fear of a British and French defeat. It is implicit in the fatalistic notion that if the war starts and lasts more than a few months we won't be able to keep out of it. It is implicit in the Roosevelt policy of giving the British and French all the help we can, with the hope, first, of averting a war, and, secondly, of enabling them to win out with the dispatch of another great American expeditionary force.

If the reasons cited by Mr. Hornbeck for our going to war in 1917 seem now, as we look back, to have been good and sufficient, they are presumably good and sufficient for our getting into the next one. Maybe so. But I can't take the jump from Mr. Hornbeck's list of causes to the conclusion that there was at stake in 1917 our "right to exist, in security, as a sovereign and independent democratic state." Or that this supreme national interest is present for us in the disaster that now hovers over Europe.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Step By Step To Here

MY FIRST thought was when I picked up the papers Monday morning and read of the trade treaty concluded between Moscow and Berlin: "The great war of nerves is over and Germany has won it."

If the news came as a shock to Whitehall; if Whitehall was "stunned," as the papers tell us it was, then there is no measuring the stupidity of Whitehall.

Germany knows perfectly well of the deeply anti-Russian feelings of precisely those circles in England who have the closest connections with the prime minister. Germany also knows how deeply distrustful Russia is of all western capitalistic states. Therefore, as long ago as last May, and possibly earlier, Herr von Ribbentrop suggested that frank and realistic proposals be made to Moscow.

Hitler, of course, declined to be openly identified with this idea, to which the Nazi extremists, including Herr Himmler, the head of the secret police, were wedded, but he told them to proceed, and if their achievements were successful they would be indorsed by him.

Not Friendly With Anyone

HERR VON RIBBENTROP took the attitude at the outset that the German and Soviet regimes could not, of course, be real friends, but, they agreed, neither could the Soviets be real friends with the western capitalist states, particularly with the British government, headed by Mr. Chamberlain. They suggested to the Soviets a three-point program: A trade agreement; a mutual non-aggression pact—that the two nations under no circumstances would go to war against each other; and an agreement regarding the Baltic states. I am quite sure that all three points have been achieved, or will be, by Mr. Ribbentrop in Moscow. Whether the last point will take the form of an eastern Locarno, by which both nations guarantee the Baltic states, or whether it will take the form of an agreement about spheres of influence in the Baltic states—by which Russia is given Esthonia and possibly Latvia—is a nice question.

Meanwhile, while the radical group in Germany was making this "realistic" approach to the Soviet Union, deepening in the Soviets the fear of Mr. Chamberlain, the "conservative" group in Germany was making a similarly realistic approach to Great Britain. They were telling the British that the radical element among the German Nazis was becoming extremely strong; that the financial situation of Germany was such that unless it were helped Germany would blow up in chaos and bolshevism, and they were proposing a great general "appeasement."

U. S. Financiers Took Part In Talks

THIS APPEASEMENT was to take the form of a "new and better Versailles."

England was to give Germany a big loan; there was to be a "gradual unscrambling of armaments;" both countries were to enter together into a trade bloc along the lines proposed at the meeting at Dusseldorf between the British and German industrialists just before the Czech affair, whereby Germany and Britain were to collaborate in an enormous export drive at the expense of other exporting nations, and there were to be agreements on a colonial policy for the mutual development of sparsely populated sections of the globe.

American financiers participated in these discussions. Their business was to get the American Government to join in the plan.

Some inkling of it got out when the conversations between Herr Wohltat and Mr. Hudson became known. Some inkling of it was implicit in any number of things that have happened.

For instance, one may well ask why the British were so anxious to hand over Czecho-Slovakia's gold to Germany, or why they brought pressure on the French to return the Spanish gold to Franco—when there was a distinct probability that Franco might use it to pay his debts to the Italians and the Germans; or why the British have been sending enormous shipments of basic war materials for armament purposes—rubber, tin, copper—to the depletion of their own supplies, to Germany in the last days. (This fact has at last been reported by both the New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune in this country.)

British Anxiety Due To Finances

THE BRITISH anxiety for a general deal has been due in part to their own financial situation. Starting rearmament with an enormous national debt, and having to increase it drastically with a large purchasing power among the masses due to social services and wage agreements, and with the resources of the nation being suddenly and drastically canalized into capital goods away from consumer goods, the British government has been in terrible fear of an inflation, without being in possession of the means to at least keep it hidden which a totalitarian state has.

So while having given unilateral military guarantees to Poland, and Rumania, and Greece, and Turkey, British leaders have been negotiating with Germany for a vast economic deal implicating everybody.

They have thought that their own rearmament and the menace of war would make it possible for them to make a deal by compromise in which Britain and France, her satellite, would have something to say about the terms.

Well, the result is the place where the world stands this morning. If the world really knows where it stands.

Either a titanic deal is on to which even Russia may be a party or Britain is in the most appalling dilemma imaginable. She has guaranteed to go to war if Poland decides to fight. Poland must either fight or perish, unless some great deal is in the offing.

Dansig Is Still The Critical Point

THE CRITICAL point is still Danzig. If the Germans take Danzig and fortify it, it will mean that not a single Polish soldier can stay in Pomorze, the so-called Corridor. The new German artillery can cover the entire Corridor from both sides. Poland will lose her outlet to the Baltic and the Gdynia-Silesia Railroad, and that will mean that her economic lifeblood will be drained and her vital industries south and east of Warsaw will be starved. Even if Russia supplied her with everything she could last only a few weeks, and without Russia it will probably be only a matter of days.

The British treasury has been dragging out the matter of a loan to Poland whereby she could buy armaments.

Instead of giving her the money to buy arms wherever she could, the British treasury has demanded that they should be bought in England and has not been able to supply them.

The Polish standing army of 300,000 men is well equipped, but there are not anything like enough rifles even for an army of a million, which would be necessary in case of war. The Polish cavalry is inadequately equipped. The Polish high command has been expecting that the British would immediately see to these deficiencies, and has been disappointed.

A Triumph Of Double-Crossing

THE WHOLE situation is a triumph of double-crossing, hardly a sincere word has been spoken in years. Mr. Chamberlain has been thinking about the next elections while he held the fate of Britain in his hands. The Russians have lied in their popular-front espousal of "democracy," for which they have only contempt. Both Stalin and Hitler need each other, despite the fact that they are genuinely inimical to each other. But the Russian dictatorship and its ruthless oppression have been constantly justified to the Russian people on the ground of a fascist menace, as the fascist oppression has been justified to the German people on the ground of a Communist menace, and more lately of a war menace.

The British government has dallied between the never-relinquished hope of reaching an understanding with the Nazis—if they would only act in a little more reasonable way and divide the booty—and the fear of them.

In every country, including our own, open and secret agents of the Nazis and the Communists have been confusing the public mind.

Hitler won Germany by playing off the right against the left—by promising the impoverished middle classes and the unemployed his own form of socialism, "a better and more reasonable communism," and by promising the great industrialists freedom from labor troubles, a clear field and plenty of state orders.

It is incredible that what Hitler succeeded in doing in domestic affairs, he may now have succeeded in doing on a world scale.

For the present moment we had better wait and see.

Roosevelt Board Urges University For All-Americas

By the Associated Press

Plans for possible establishment of an inter-American university in Puerto Rico to strengthen cultural ties with the other nations of this hemisphere were transmitted by the White House yesterday to Secretary Ickes.

The program, formulated by President Roosevelt's commission, included recommendations and a tentative outline of procedure for possible extension of the scope of the University of Puerto Rico into a Pan American institution.

The report said establishment of an inter-American university in Puerto Rico would promote greater understanding and community of culture along the democracies of this hemisphere. Upon these factors, it added, would rest ultimately the full political and economic co-operation of these nations.

August Examination

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, uncle, how are you feeling now?

Uncle Sam—I haven't had that hemmed-in feeling that bothered me so much. What's happened around here lately?

Dr. Roosevelt—What hasn't happened?

Uncle Sam—You must have let a lot of internes and nurses go off my case.

Dr. Roosevelt—I didn't let 'em go; they just went.

Uncle Sam—Have they gone for good?

Dr. Roosevelt—Whether it's for good or bad won't be determined for some time. It depends on whether you get better fast or have a relapse.

Uncle Sam—I have a feeling I can get right up and walk out of this hospital.

Dr. Roosevelt—If you do it will be terribly embarrassing; and I've been embarrassed enough lately.

Uncle Sam—Why don't you stop worrying about me?

Dr. Roosevelt—Nothing worries me more than the fear the day may come when I needn't worry about you.

Uncle Sam—Say, doc, what about your bill?

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't worry about the bill.

Uncle Sam—Somebody will have to worry about it.

Dr. Roosevelt—Yes, but it won't be us.

Uncle Sam—I'd like to get some idea what all these expensive treatments are going to cost. I must be terribly in debt.

Dr. Roosevelt—Nonsense. What you owe me is really an investment.

Uncle Sam—Very well, then, what is my total investment in doctors' bills, medicines, massages, operations, etc.

Dr. Roosevelt—You'll find out in due time.

Uncle Sam—It's cracks like that that bring back my old nervous trouble. Say, what about that new treatment I was to undergo?

Dr. Roosevelt—It's been called off. I couldn't get the money. I'm terribly sorry.

Uncle Sam. Don't apologize. It's O. K. with me. I welcome a chance to let nature take its course.

Dr. Roosevelt—You're making a big mistake.

Uncle Sam—Well, it's good to feel that if a mistake is being made it's mine and not the medical staff's.

Dr. Roosevelt—By the way, how have you been sleeping lately?

Uncle Sam—Not so good. I imagine I hear noises as if somebody was trying to break into my room.

Dr. Roosevelt—That's not imagination. That's a dozen men trying to break into your room. There's Garner, McNutt, Tydings, Hull, Taft, Vandenberg, Hopkins and a half dozen more.

Uncle Sam—Don't they know what the visiting hours are?

Dr. Roosevelt—Yes, but they're not visiting; they think they're specialists; they want to move in and take over your case.

Korda's 'Four Feathers' Is Heroic Spectacle

Technicolor Production Was Filmed in Africa; Veteran Firemen to See 'The Still Alarm:' News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

FAR-FLUNG, gorgeous and exciting as it was deemed at the time of its release almost two years ago, "Drums" seems now to have been no more than a tuning-up exercise indulged in by Alexander Korda in preparation for "Four Feathers."

As this R. C. Sheriff screen adaptation of the story by A. E. W. Mason unspooled itself at yesterday afternoon's preview, it pursued a crescendo of excitement and interest that was almost overwhelming. Beginning with a conventional romance in British army circles, and a touch of cowardice in the youngest son of a long line of fighters, it became later a reconstruction of Kichener's campaign in the Sudan, climaxed by the rout of the African tribesmen at Omdurman and the siege of Khartoum, executed on an unprecendented scale of magnitude and magnificence. With all of its cumulative fury and glorification of British arms, "Four Feathers" never loses sight of its basic story of interrupted love and the conversion of a craven into a hero of vast courage and accomplishment in the face of seemingly insuperable odds.

BELL

The Technicolor treatment of the film is superb. The beauties of African sunsets, moonlit nights on the desert and the blue waters of the Nile have been made to supply an exotically entrancing background for events that are never overpowered by the picturesqueness of their settings. The picture is as much a triumph for the color experts and the camera crew as it is for the principals in a cast of excellent selection.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the Mason story, either from reading or earlier picturization, the title is derived from the insult hurled at Lieut. Harry Faversham by three of his fellow officers when he resigns his commission on the eve of active service with Kitchener's hard-pressed army. They mail him three white feathers, to which his bride adds a fourth when she learns why he has not departed with his regiment. The manner in which the courageous coward redeems each feather, in turn, forms the basic theme of a grim and heroic Odyssey.

As was the case in "Stanley and Livingstone," this United Artists release was filmed in large part in the actual locale of the story in Africa. The number of natives used in various capacities in the African sequences runs far into the thousands.

If war should break out in Europe, it would be a friendly suggestion to let Alexander Korda fight it for the British. The war he puts on in "Four Feathers" would be a winning one on any continent.

A new and attractive young leading woman is introduced to the American screen in "Four Feathers" in the person of June Duprez. Miss Duprez is a little like several other actresses without being too much like any of them. In appearance, she suggests both Merle Oberon (Mrs. Alexander Korda) and Evelyn Venable. In voice and manner of speech, Maureen O'Sullivan is frequently brought to mind. Master J. Raymond Bell—no relation—host at the preview screening of the film opening tomorrow at Loew's Palace, even pretended to detect fleeting resemblances between Miss Duprez and Alice Brady, although nothing of the sort suggested itself to these keen green eyes. Miss Duprez, at any rate, is highly decorative and plays with commendable repression.

It is on Friday of this week that the Variety Club's annual golf tournament will be held at the Congressional Country Club. This all-day fiesta, as a matter of fact, is more than any mere single-event celebration. It includes every form of "country club" diversion for both the Varieteers and the Varieteeresses, concluding with a dinner and dance that may continue until goodness knows when. Of course, you can play golf if you want to. A feature of this outing always is the generous array of handsome prizes that are awarded even the dubbiest of the dubs. This year the potential plunder is said to be terrific, no less.

The general standing of the leaders in the "Going Native" popularity vote at Loew's Capitol was not materially changed by Monday's balloting. Sylvia Kaplowitz and her Accordion Septet remain in the lead. Some of the contenders, however, are creeping up, notably Banks Murray, jr., the embryonic master of ceremonies, and Robert Youmans, the theater's usher-xylophonist. Otherwise, the old order changeth not, giving way to no new.

The efficiency of modern fire departments, needless to say, is due in large measure to the constant anxiety of those in command to learn all of the intricacies of their calling. That obviously accounts for the fact that a week from tonight the officers and trustees of the International Association of Fire Fighters will attend the Roadside Theater's performance of "The Still Alarm," in a body. Their trip to the Roadside will be in celebration of their night off from the official business of the convention, which represents a membership of some 44,000 in more than 600 cities of the United States and its possessions and the Dominion of Canada.

Among those who will be in the theater party are included Fred W. Baer, Kansas City, Mo., president of the association; George Richardson, formerly of the Vancouver, British Columbia, fire department, secretary; E. L. Carlin, retired member of the Pittsburgh department; Capt. James M. Cady, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Assistant Chief John J. O'Doherty, Lorain, Ohio.

Boy, will they learn something!

Midnight this Saturday is the deadline for entries in the contest to find a new name for the Loew tabliod newspaper that makes its appearance from time to time and is distributed to the patrons of the Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters. First prize is a free vacation trip for two persons at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point Comfort, Va., with round-trip transportation on the N. & W. S. S. Line. The present name of the publication is "Loew's Movie-Goer." It has been suggested that that be retained, but the powers that be say no. In addition to the vacation award, 50 pairs of guest tickets to various Loew attractions will be given away as additional prizes to those who come close.

And Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, still doesn't know when the new season of living drama will open in his tabernacle of the arts. First definite booking, so far, is the Lunt and Fontanne "Taming of the Shrew," for the week of October 2, and that is only tentative—if you can make anything out of that.

By Bud Abbott and Lou Costello,

(Comedy Stars of "Streets of Paris." and Today's Guest Columnist for Leonard Lyons.)

ABBOTT—That's just my luck. Here we get our first chance to be newspapermen and meet interesting people, and all they give me to do is interview you.

COSTELLO—What difference does it make. They'll never give us more than one assignment, anyway.

ABBOTT—Do you mean to tell me you're going to try to be a newspaperman, too? Why, you don't even know that a newspaper is our best advertising medium.

COSTELLO—Yes, I do. I'm taking a newspaper home for my father to look for a job.

ABBOTT—You dumb cluck—that paper is dated 1928.

COSTELLO—Well, jobs were easier to get then.

ABBOTT—What type of work does your father do?

COSTELLO—He's a diamond cutter.

ABBOTT—You mean he works on precious stones?

COSTELLO—No. He cuts the grass in baseball parks.

ABBOTT—How about getting started on this interview business? I'll give you first crack at it. Ask me some questions.

COSTELLO—Okay. Now, Abbott, the first thing a newspaperman asks in an interview is, "Where were you born?"

ABBOTT—I was born in Coney Island.

COSTELLO—Are you kidding?

ABBOTT—No.

COSTELLO—You were born at Coney Island?

ABBOTT—That's right.

COSTELLO—No wonder you can't pass a hot dog stand without making a spiel!

ABBOTT—I never sold a hot dog in my life. I've been in show business ever since I was able to walk. I come of a theatrical family. My father was a press agent with a circus and my mother was a featured bareback rider—and I was doing all right till I met you. You came from some place in New Jersey, didn't you?

COSTELLO—Yes, I was a March 6, 1908, baby in Paterson, N. J. Right after I was graduated from high school I hit the old thumb trail to Hollywood. When I landed there I got a job in pictures. How about you, Abbott, were you ever in pictures?

ABBOTT—Yes, I played in "Dinner at Eight."

COSTELLO—I saw "Dinner at Eight," but I didn't see you.

ABBOTT—Well, I was hungry—I ate at 6:30.

COSTELLO—Talking about eating, when did we have our first meal as partners?

ABBOTT—That was ten years ago, wasn't it? We were in burlesque at the time. By the way, Costello, how did you happen to get into burlesque?

COSTELLO—Well, when the talkies came in I went out. They fired me. At the time I thought it was the toughest break in my life. I worked my way back East by easy stages. When I got to New York I heard a Minsky burlesque company was looking for someone to take the place of Joe Penner. They thought I resembled Penner and that got me the job. Carry on, Abbott.

ABBOTT—I was working in the same theater as treasurer when your straight man became ill. Being a pal of yours, you asked me to help you out. We clicked as a team right away and you talked me into chucking my treasurer's job and going into vaudeville with you.

COSTELLO—We played every small theater that would book us. Pickings were rather lean for us then. You could tell how we were doing by the way we paid off our manager, Ed Sherman.

ABBOTT—Yes, when we had a good week he got his commission in five or ten spots. Otherwise he got paid off entirely in $1 bills.

COSTELLO—We haven't forgotten those days when the road wasn't so smooth. The day after "Streets of Paris" opened and we saw all those rave notices about us in the papers we called Sherman up and told him some important business matter had come up, and to meet us at the Hickory House.

ABBOTT: Sherman was all excited when we sat down with him. But before he had a chance to say anything you and I pulled out 500 $1 bills, crumpled them up and told him it was his commission. It made a big pile and you should have seen the look on his face as he wearily smoothed those bills out. Our success in "Streets of Paris" has made us feel that life is worth while.

East Washington Troupers Offer 'Hail, Nero,' at Sylvan

Allusions flew and parallels ran last night at the Sylvan Theater, where the Troupers of East Washington Community Center were presented in "Hail Nero," a "re-interpretation of history" by Mary Stocks.

Just across the Ellipse from the White House, last night's audience of 3,500 chuckled knowingly at thinly celophaned remarks of slum clearance and holiday changes. Miss Stocks' satire, laid in first century Rome, gains most of its effectiveness from its timely digs.

It is, at heart, a definition of the pathetic position of the "liberal." Nero, she sees as a well-meaning and benevolent despot, whose aims for the people are alternately thwarted by his own ineffectual manner and his associates' wariness of their own material well-being. Quite aside from its levity of lines, the play is a depressing and pessimistic view of anyone who tries do something that is for "the greatest good of the greatest number."

Why Rome Burned

For Nero seeks to do away with the misery and wretchedness of his masses. His councilors are of no help to him through their complete absorption in self. Seneca, the philosopher, cannot make up his mind to do anything. Augusta, his wife, wishes the people to be happy through merrymaking and other temporary sources of pleasure. Cleon, a man of Greek background, destroys Nero's trust in him by revealing a distinct leaning toward entrenched wealth. Thessalus, the court physician, is the most reactionary of all. The slum clearance bill will never become effective.

And that, says Miss Stocks, is why Nero burned Rome. To do away with the hovels of the poor so that he might build better ones, the emperor shifts his wife's birthday to allow the fire brigade a "Roman holiday," but he himself remains in the city.

This thesis for poor Nero is an interesting one and Miss Stocks points it up, unmistakably. "Pity the unhappy middle-of-the-road man," she cries with contemporary zest, a zest which was present in L. Zaff Rogers' direction of his cast on the large grassy stage, but which was lacking from the speech of the performers.

Poorly Spoken

The entire cast was guilty of slovenly enunciation, an occurrence frequent in amateur productions and always most deplorable. The Troupers last night avoided all the "g's" and "t's" they found in the script.

The cast was headed by Pat Blake, Carolyn Rogers, Al Muelhaus, Davis Agey, Ruth Learn, Ernest N. Johnson, Lee Shugar, Gus Wildt, Harry Whiting, Alma Leman, Louis Diamond, Jack Elvin and J. D. Boone. The play was presented by the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks and followed a concert by the Chestnut Farms Chevy Chase Dairy Employes' Band.

Little

Poland, Russia and France come ominously to the fore in the Little Theater's strangely well-timed revival of "Conquest," the Greta Garbo-Charles Boyer film of two seasons ago.

This spectacular romance of Marie Walewska and Napoleon achieves a unique contemporary interest in a story which concerns the aim of a Polish idealist to free her land from Russia and of her romance with the great man of France. Her faithfulness to him throughout his exile at Elba and during the hundred days which preceded Waterloo and St. Helena forms the romantic appeal of the film.

One of the most impressive features of "Conquest" is its cast. In support of the two stars are Maria Ouspenskaya, Reginald Owen, Alan Marshal, Henry Stephenson, Dame May Whitty, Leif Erikson, C. Henry Gordon, Claude Gillingwater, George Houston, George Zucco, Robert Warwick, Henry Kolker, George Givot, Bodil Rosing, and Rosina Galli.

It was as Napoleon that Charles Boyer made one of his earliest triumphs in this country. His performance, possibly because of the importance of the role, was acclaimed over that of Miss Garbo. The Swedish star's first picture since "Conquest" has yet to be released.

Because of the length of the feature, the Little is supplementing it with only two other items, Walt Disney's "Mickey's Elephant" and the Pathe News.

Studio Has Stable Of Movie Boxers

Mushy Callahan reports he's running a regular training headquarters at Warner Bros., with six players conditioning for three pictures and Erol Flynn working out just for exercise.

A stage at the studio has been turned into a gymnasium. There John Payne and William Haade are currently winding up for Payne's new staring film, "Kid Nightingale." Ronald Reagan is training for a boxing affair in his next film of the Secret Service series. Johnnie (Scat) Davis and Frank Faylen are working hard for their boxing scenes in the featurette, "Slapsie Maxie's."

Finally, if you can call it training, Maxie Rosenbloom himself is making a few gestures with gloves punching bags, skipping rope and so on, for the same film—but only when being photographed.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 22 (DNS).—What a line-up of famous troupers of yesterday will be represented in "The Times of Tony Pastor," to be filmed by Warners. Nat Goodwin, May Irwin, Maggie Cline, Francis Wilson, Ned Harrigan, Weber and Fields and Lillian Russell will all be seen and the songs they made famous such as "Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay," "After the Ball," "The Belle of Avenue A," and "Sweet Marie" will be heard. Jack Warner and Hal Wallis have accepted Earl Baldwin's story on Pastor, the man who made vaudeville popular and a place where women could go without being criticized. A writer of songs, a singer of topical numbers and a great manager, he gave away a fortune to the poor and was much loved in the theatrical profession.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Zorina, who has gone to Europe for a month, will be borrowed for one of the leads and Edward G. Robinson plays Pastor, when he finishes "Dr. Ehrlich," which, by the way, is not a matter of discussion at th Hays office. I wonder why?

They are as happy as happy can be over signing Jeanne Cagney, Jimmy's 21-year-old sister at Paramount, for she looks like a natural. She has Jimmy's smile, she talks like him, walks like him and, moreover, she has acting ability. Neither of her brothers, Jimmy or Bill, did anything to get her in the movies. She was really discovered by a talent scout, who saw her at the Pasadena Community Playhouse and he was so impressed that a test was arranged. Within record time—24 hours to be exact—she was signed and put into "Campus Wives" as her first picture.

Training animals for the movies is a business in itself and pretty well established by Rennie Renfro, who discovered Daisy, the dog, for the "Blondie" series. Daisy cost the elegant sum of $3, but when Renfro needed a double for her, he had to pay $500, a record price for an unpedigreed pooch. The cute little poodle, Zero ("Sucker"), that follows Gene Reynolds so faithfully in "They Shall Have Music" is also a Renfro dog and was recruited from the city pound. Thor, the Great Dane in the "Hound of the Baskervilles," is from Renfro's kennels. There are 60 dogs in all, trained by Renfro, and he has to have the patience of job. It isn't the highly-bred dogs who are the most intelligent ones, but the mongrels who seem to learn the movie tricks with less difficulty.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gossip is current that Edna Best may reconsider her decision not to divorce Herbert Marshall. Nat Wolff is said to be the reason; Michael Bartlett is back in town after a long absence. He will appear later with the San Francisco Opera Company; that prince of Isabel Jewell's was her devoted companion at the Cafe Lamaze; Jackie Coogan at the Brown Derby with Buddy Westmore by his side consoling him; Rita Johnson and George Sidney are becoming a habit; Joan Bennett will wear her natural hair in "Green Hell." That's something that ought to make the fans happy; Marlene Dietrich missed her train in New York and so she won't get here until Friday; Kay Francis is still sick with a cold and so is Gene Markey.

Olympe Bradna's new boy friend is Don Ettlinger. He was Gwynn Pickford's big moment before she married Bud Ernst; Nancy Carroll and Squadron Leader James Addams, dashing English aviator, lingering long after the dinner hour at Sardis; Nat Pendleton host to his uncle, Prof. Reginald Hall Johnson, of the University of Pittsburgh; Interesting that Arthur Johnson of the silent days was his brother; Bob Perry's son, Charlie, has had his story "Bridge of Sighs" accepted by Bryan Foy; Harry Joe Brown leaves early next week to visit Sally Eilers in Dennis, Mass., where she is appearing in a play; William Holden, when he arrived in New York, was given a reception that few boys rate in their entire lives; Ilona Massey is said to be a knockout in "Balalaika" and this doesn't come from an M-G-M'er. Nelson Eddy, too, gets a world of praise from someone who saw a sneak preview.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Old-Timers Talk

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif. Aug. 22.—Universal's got a winner in Gloria Jean, who's 11. Talk about personality! Eyes blue as bachelor buttons, red hair. And they haven't tried to change her, but are leaving her as is, freckles, crooked tooth and all. She's utterly unself-conscious. Has been singing since 15 months. Her Unkle Jack started coaching her when she was 5. She and her mother were all packed to leave with her first picture, "The Under Pup," which, incidentally, is a knockout, three days before time.

HOPPER

Oldest sister is swimming champion; younger one, Gloria's stand-in, wants to be an actress. When I saw them, Gloria was carrying little sister in her arms; they were doing the balcony scene from "Wuthering Heights." Baby sister calls Gloria "Little Her." You should hear Gloria sing the Bell Song from "Lakma" and "Annie Laurie" with Scotch accent. I'm afraid they've got a find on their hands.

When our producers get themselves tangled up in foreign complications they usually say "Get Joe Kennedy. He'll fix it." Our English Ambassador is fast becoming our motion picture ambassador, too. Why not? I'sed to have his own company here long before he became a diplomat. With Jimmy Roosevelt and Mr. Kennedy, we should have smooth sailing.

Bet Greg Ratoff could have used a good diplomat the other day. Right in the middle of a "take" Chinese actor threw down his hat, refused to go on. "Why?" screamed Greg. Pointing to Japanese visitors, China boy replied: "Won't work with spies on set."

And did you konw that Mussolini's son Vittorio is now editor-in-chief of all Italian fan magazines? And has complete control over everything pertaining to picture industry.

And guess what Edington's got up his sleeve for next year? "Tobacco Road," which has run six years on Broadway. Harry says the book isn't nearly as dirty as the play. He's so persuasive, he all but made me believe it's Sunday school stuff.

Edington's also dickering with Janet Gaynor on "Forever," Mildred Cramm's delightful story which Janet owns. Hopes to get Laurence Olivier for it. Deals with forever after. Would you mind being a ghost with him? I wouldn't!

Speaking of ghosts, they're trying out a new makeup for John Garfield. You'll see only his spirit in "Four Wives," sequel to "Four Daughters." He has to have that wraith-like look. Knew all along it was a mistake to kill him off but what a way to bring him back! Hope it won't end in a blue flame.

In Victor McLaglen's picture "Rio" a clause specifies that he must kill the character played by Basil Rathbone and I'll lay you a wager he'll upstage the corpse.

Mauritz Stiller came to Hollywood only because they let his friend, Garbo, come, too. Garbo succeeded. When Dolly Haas was urged to come here she insisted her husband, John Brahm, be given work. So far, he's had the good luck; hers has all been bad. A year and a half at Columbia, doing anything. Now, she's out opposite Paul Muni in "We Are Not Alone" and little Jane Bryan is in.

Now you can relax. Barbara Stanwyck will be "Sister Carrie" even though Theodore Dreiser said that Agna Enters should do it. Which gave Hollywood an hysterical giggle on a hot day. Irene Dunne and Carole Lombard were also mentioned for the part.

Tientsin Flood Toll Rises; Terror Brought to 3,000,000

British and Americans Plan to Remove Women and Children After New Threats By Mobs; Japanese Protest Rejected

By the Associated Press

Tientsin, Aug. 22.—China, torn by war, flood, famine and disease, bore still heavier burdens of distress tonight.

There was no death estimate from the flooded area in and around Tientsin in northern China, but the rampaging Hai River was known to have taken an enormous life toll. Officials, seeking outside aid, said 3,000,000 persons were affected.

American and British authorities planned to evacuate their women and children if boats could be obtained. The American women and children, about 100, were to be sent to Chinwangtao, a beach resort northeast of Tientsin. United States Marines were offering food and inoculations to all Americans.

The water in some places was 10 to 15 feet deep and continued to rise. Disease spread rapidly and authorities were unable to obtain sufficient vaccine and medicine.

In the midst of this natural disaster, the British were informed that the anti-British campaign at Petaiho, a beach resort 150 miles north of Tientsin, had become so intense that English women and children must be taken away.

The Japanese-controlled municipal government at Shanghai today received unqualified rejection from the International Settlement council of demands for indemnity, an apology and punishment for a British police sergeant who killed two and wounded six of the Japanese-controlled government's policemen with a submachine gun last Saturday.

In a note to the puppet government the council said evidence showed the sergeant "fired in self-defense."

Poland Will Fight, Even Though Alone, Says Envoy, Admitting 'Things Are Pretty Bad'

"I Don't Think Germany Will Have Her Own Way" — "Poland's Attitude Toward German Demands Has Not Changed" — "Poland Will Fight, Even If She Has to Fight Alone!"

POLISH AMBASSADOR POTOCKI IS SHOWN IN THIS CANDID STRIP AS HE WAS INTERVIEWED YESTERDAY

By Edward T. Folliard

Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to the United States, said late yesterday that, despite the startling German-Russian embrace, Poland was ready to fight if Germany threatened her integrity and would fight alone, if necessary.

Count Potocki, often described as the handsomest and best-dressed foreign envoy in Washington, confessed that the crisis involving his country seemed "pretty bad."

Among reporters in his Sixteenth street embassy were several who, less than a year ago, heard Col. Vladimir Hurban, Czecho-Slovakia Minister, utter brave words before the "appeasement" of Munich.

"There is no question of appeasement now," said Count Potocki.

He was reminded that, in the opinion of military experts, Poland's army would be no match for the Nazi juggernaut.

"I don't think Germany will have it her own way if it comes to a showdown," he said confidently.

The Polish nobleman, owner of an estate in the old country on which he maintains a racing stable of Anglo-Arabian stock, sat under a portrait of Gen. Thaddeus Kosciusko, Polish patriot who fought with America's Continental Army in the War of Independence.

Nearby was Kosciusko's crayon portrait of Thomas Jefferson, who once toasted the "brave Danzigers" for defending their independence against Frederick of Prussia. At another end of the room was a portrait of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Poland's George Washington. Count Potocki, after fighting under the Austrian flag from 1914 to 1917, was Pilsudski's aide de camp in the anti-Bolshevik campaign of 1919-20.

In a statement he said was prepared on the basis of latest advices from Warsaw, Count Potocki set forth:

"Poland's attitude toward Germany's aggressive demands has not been changed by the announcement of the intention of Germany and Russia to conclude a pact of non-aggression.

"The Polish government were aware all along of the difficulties experienced in the negotiations between Russia on one side and France and England on the other. The Polish government were prepared that those negotiations might not succeed, Russia obviously showing a lack of interest to participate fully and actively on the side of the democracies in the threatening conflict with Germany.

"Thus for Poland the material situation of the political problems remains unchanged. The latest developments have proved the accuracy of the Polish attitude and of Poland's opposition to the idea of permitting Russian troops to cross Poland's territory.

"As things stand now, the proposed German-Soviet pact is but in the making and awaits further discussions in Moscow, and it is not excluded that—like in the negotiations carried on by France and England—Germany, too, may meet with difficulties."

Count Potocki was asked what Poland would do if Great Britain and France failed to come to her aid.

"If there is any threat to Polish integrity," he said, "Poland will fight even if she has to fight alone."

At that moment, Witold Wankowicz, counselor of the embassy, entered to tell Count Potocki that word had just come over the radio that Great Britain was standing pat on her promise to aid Poland in event her independence was threatened.

"Of course," Count Potocki continued, "this new development gives Germany a trump card. However, we don't know yet how she will play it. I doubt very much that England and France will be intimidated.

"There has been a great change since Munich. At that time England and France were not prepared. Today they are. There is no question of appeasement now as there was last year."

"What about the chances of war?" he was asked.

"Things seem pretty bad," he said, solemnly. "But I would only be guessing if I tried to say what is going to happen. There are rapid moves and changes. We don't know what is going to happen overnight. I don't think we ought to be guessing now."

U. S. Officials Plan To Move Citizens

for evacuating United States citizens had been ready for months, and were first prepared in the Czech crisis.

The Maritime Commission spokesman said that should it become necessary "all American flag ships in European waters immediately would be dispatched to the various ports to take aboard American nationals."

"A large number could be evacuated immediately, but it undoubtedly would take considerable time to get them all home," he said.

The State Department estimated there were 100,000 American citizens, including tourists, in countries likely to be involved in conflict. Of the total 75,000 were classed as permanent residents abroad.

The department's last figure, compiled as of January 1, showed there were 2,569 Americans listed as permanent residents in Poland, 5,787 in Germany, 3,793 in the old territory of Czecho-Slovakia, 12,964 in France, 10,522 in Great Britain and Northern Ireland and 23,330 in Italy. There were 28 in Danzig, 800 in Hungary, 1,383 in Belgium and 729 in Rumania.

These numbers are swollen greatly at present by thousands of American tourists. The department disclosed 16,080 passports were issued in May, 21,013 in June and 10,393 in July, most of them for travel in Europe.

Officials were not certain whether gold would have to be sent abroad to pay the travel expenses of marooned Americans, as was done at the outbreak of the World War. They thought a large number could be given passage on American boats and credit arrangements made to take care of those traveling on foreign ships.

Treasury officials declined to discuss the meeting, but reiterated the policy of "business as usual" announced by Secretary Morgenthau at the time of the last European crisis this spring.

The State Department has advised the American embassy in Warsaw to use its best judgment in giving such cautionary advice to Americans in Poland as the situation calls for. No report has been received from the embassy that Americans had been advised to leave Poland.

Those who met direct the agencies that would be most vitally concerned in event of war. It is believed they are preparing for the return of President Roosevelt, who has announced that if Europe goes to war, he will call a special session of Congress to renew his fight for discretionary neutrality legislation.

Just before the last session adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt warned Congress that, because of their failure to relax restrictions of the neutrality act, he would summon members if the "war of nerves" abroad exploded into hostilities.

One official, who declined to be quoted, described the European situation as "too critical for comment." The gravity was further emphasized when Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to London, yesterday cut short a vacation in France to be on hand when the British Parliament meets in special session Thursday.

Some persons close to the State Department, after a study of dispatches concerning the Russo-German agreement to negotiate a non-aggression pact, were inclined to attach less importance to it than at first.

They said the projected pact would largely duplicate the existing nonaggression treaty between the two, and probably would be provided with an escape clause which would serve to free Russia's hands in case Germany should be an aggressor. They said they still believed it possible for an Anglo-French-Russian mutual assistance pact to be worked out.

The American Government is prepared, in case of war, to raise monetary and economic safeguards to protect American interests at home and abroad. These and other emergency measures were understood to have been discussed at the Welles meeting.

While developments were coming swiftly abroad, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, at Denison, said he believed the President would call a special session to consider neutrality "and other measures necessary to prevent our entanglement in a foreign war" if the present European crisis leads to armed conflict. Connally is a ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Britain's Cabinet Seeks War Power

tion already in effect. Under a measure enacted on May 25, the government is empowered to mobilize part or all of the country's fighting forces, without a special proclamation.

The extent of the mobilization measures has not been divulged. Beginning this month, more than 12,000 naval reservists were called up to swell the complements of 133 warships of the reserve fleet, all of which are now commissioned and entering the first stages of the big maneuvers with the home fleet in the North Sea.

An admiralty spokesman said tonight that from today onward no information would be divulged of the movements of British warships. He admitted that additional naval reservists were being called up, but declined to give the number. The total of such reservists is close to 70,000.

The bulk of the country's anti-aircraft defenses is already manned night and day, largely by units of the territorial army. Many units of the territorial field army are now undergoing special training in summer camps, and a substantial share of the regular army reservists was called to the colors several weeks ago.

Special measures are being taken to provide accommodations for various defense ministries and their personnel. Tonight large numbers of beds, mattresses and blankets were being carted to the air ministry in trucks. Beds were being set up in the air raid shelters in the basement of the ministry building.

French Call Reserves

Paris, Aug. 22 (AP).—France rallied hundreds of thousands of reservists to the colors to match Germany's forces and sat tight tonight on her hope that Soviet Russia was up to no serious alliance with Nazi Germany.

Premier Daladier stalked out of an hour and a half cabinet meeting in the war ministry to talk with Generalissimo Maurice Gamelin.

Gamelin, commander-to-be of French-British land forces should war come, and supreme commander of his nation's land, sea and air armies, was said to have told Daladier that they were materially prepared for "any eventuality."

The number of reservists called was estimated in the neighborhood of 600,000. The superior war council met early in the day and was expected to meet again tomorrow.

[French military forces will thus be brought immediately to a strength of 1,500,000 men on war footing, it was reported, the United Press said.

[Daladier ordered that there be no mobilization but the understanding was that the system of individual recall, similar to that used in last September's crisis, goes into operation tonight.—Editor's note.]

A brief communique said new instructions had been wired "to French ambassadors abroad."

[These instructions, The Post's special correspondent said, were to the effect that France's obligations to go to the aid of Poland in event of Nazi aggression remained unimpaired by the Nazi-Soviet friendship.

[This correspondent says French opinion inclines to the view that Stalin hopes to keep Russia out of war in the expectation that after Britain, France, Germany and Italy have bled themselves white in prolonged conflict, they will be ripe for communist revolution.—Editor's note.]

It was commonly believed the cabinet also put the finishing touches to the last series of military decrees necessary to prepare the armed forces for any necessary test.

Daladier's Powers

Officials said Daladier had decided not to call Parliament. The premier obtained decree powers last November that made such a call unnecessary—powers designed specifically to enable France to move "as fast and as secretly as the dictators."

One of the main reasons for these precautions appeared to be that the French government did not know just what the German-Soviet announcement of a nonaggression pact meant, but was determined to so fortify the nation that nothing could catch it napping.

The culminating point of the crisis, it was generally agreed, may come when German foreign minister Von Ribbentrop returns to Berlin.

Between now and then much might happen, but if the situation remained basically the same, Fuehrer Hitler might be ready by then to make his move—either against Danzig or Poland itself.

Some French officials inclined toward the view that Germany might force Poland to march into Danzig by a "seizure from within" by the Free City's Nazi "home army."

Through all the official theorizing, France itself was calm almost to the point of stoic grimness.

56,000 Enginemen in Britain Call Strike to Start Sunday

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 22.—A national strike of 56,000 locomotive engineers, firemen and cleaners—which if carried out could bring England's principal railroads to a virtual standstill—was called today to begin at midnight Saturday.

The call was made by the executive committee of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen upon refusal of the railways to grant wage and working improvements.

At the same time, the National Union of Railwaymen, representing 368,000 other workers, decided against strike action. It will resubmit its demand for a 50 shilling ($12.50) weekly wage minimum, an increase of five shillings ($1.25) a week in the present minimum.

[Pointing out that any transport strike would disrupt the Government's emergency preparedness program, including troop and munitions movements, The Post's special correspondent said the Cabinet's emergency powers bill would outlaw strikes.—Editor's note.]

Negotiations under the railways act have been exhausted, and only granting of the union's demands by the railroads or intervention by the minister of labor could prevent the strike, labor men said.

The railways, the London Northeastern, the London Midland and Scottish, the Southern and the Great Western contended the claims of the locomotive men would cost £1,269,000 ($5,939,000) annually and the 50 shilling minimum demanded by the National Union of Railwaymen would cost £1,087,000 ($5,097,000) annually, which they said ther financial position would not justify.

Rogelio Alfaro to Wed Senorita Davila Aug. 30

Nogales, Ariz., Will Be Scene of Ceremony; Dr. and Mme. Alfaro Leaving Capital Today by Motor

In the picturesque little city of Nogales—which is situated partly in Arizona and partly in Mexico—Rogelio Alfaro will take Senorita Lupe Davila as his bride on August 30.

To quote one of the Mexican Embassy staff, "this is one romance we have seen from start to finish." For the niece of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, Lupita, as the bonnie Senorita is sometimes called, has spent several winters here as a guest at the embassy. It was here under the roof of the embassy that the son of the former President of Panama and Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, and Lupe met, fell in love and decided to become engaged.

Inseparable companions were Senorita Davila and Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, the Ambassador's daughter, when the bride-elect wintered in Washington. In their brilliant native costumes the girls often danced together at embassy parties to the delight of the guests. Lupita is famous for a number of native Portuguese dances and adores the Ja Raba—as do all good Mexicans.

Alfaros Leave To See Son Wed

Leaving today by motor for Nogales are Dr. and Mme. Alfaro with their son, Rogelio, and daughter, Yolande. Lupe, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Davila, live on the Mexican side of Nogales, has chosen to be married in the United States. The wedding will be small and quite informal, with only members of the immediate families and a few close friends attending.

At the moment, the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, with their daughter Erma, are in Mexico City. Just whether they will be in Nogales for the wedding is not known—but chances are they will.

After a brief honeymoon the couple will go to New York City, arriving September 15. Mr. Alfaro is with the Pan American Union exhibit at the World's Fair. When the fair closes in November the bride and bridegroom will come to Washington, to make their home with Dr. and Mme. Alfaro. Mr. Alfaro will then take over his duties as attache to the Pan American Union here.

Couple to Live in Capital

After the wedding, Dr. and Mme. Alfaro, with Yolande, will travel to Mexico City, returning to Washington after November 1. The Alfaros spent the month of July at Bethany Beach, Del.

The Alfaros could almost be termed "cave dwellers"—they have become such a part of Washington. For many years Dr. Alfaro served as Minister to the United States, then he went home to become president of Panama, returning to Washington to become Minister again.

Their pretty daughter, Amelita, made her debut at a brilliant ball in the Pan American Union, and a year later became the bride of Frank Weller. She has made her home here ever since. Another tie binding them permanently to Washington is their eldest son, Dr. Victor Alfaro, who not only practices medicine here but is married to a Washington girl, the former Miss Nancy Hamilton.

En route to Buenos Aires, last season, Ivan, another son, stopped off in Panama where he was married to a Panamanian girl. They continued on to Argentina, where they now make their home. Rogelio's forthcoming marriage will leave only Yolande, who plans to make her debut in Washington this season.

Star to Have Simple Bridal

A Broadway star, Miss Flora Campbell, and Ben Cutler, orchestra leader, whose marriage will take place tomorrow, have chosen an old-fashioned wedding instead of a sensational elopement of the kind popular among so many celebrities of the entertainment world. Miss Campbell has selected as the scene of the ceremony the little town of LaFontaine, Kans., where she grew up as a child and where several generations of Campbells have made their home. The couple will exchange vows in the little church there at noon tomorrow and will then be hosts at a reception on the lawn of The Gables, home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Lucy Campbell.

Miss Campbell is the sister of Mrs. Joseph Short, of Washington, who is better known as Beth Campbell, prominent writer. She has visited her here frequently in recent years. Work will prevent Mrs. Short from attending her sister's wedding. Another sister, Mrs. Wesley P. Adams, of Toledo, Ohio, will be the bride's only attendant.

After a summer playing in the theaters at Cohasset, Mass., and Nantucket, Miss Campbell is en route to Kansas by motor. She played the leading role in the New York production of "Many Mansions" two years ago and last winter toured the Midwest for four months as the star of Sinclair Lewis' play, "Angela Is 22," in which the author also had a part.

Mr. Cutler is a graduate of Yale, where he was a member of Skull and Bones. In order to raise money to continue the study of singing for grand opera, he started an orchestra several years ago, which has been so successful that he will open next month for an engagement in New York's Rainbow Room. Before returning to Manhattan for this engagement he and his bride will spend several weeks at a ranch in the West.

Miss Campbell is the daughter of T. Bernard Campbell, of Tyler, Tex., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cutler, of Andover, Mass.

Thompson-Swift Wedding Is Set For September 16

Miss Elizabeth Ross Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Smith Hempstone, of Washington, will be married to Garfield Swift, son of Justin R. Swift, of Evanston, Ill., and nephew of Admiral William B. Fletcher, September 16.

The ceremony will be performed at 5 p. m. at St. Thomas' Church, with the Rev. Howard Wilkinson officiating.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception for members of the families and intimate friends will be held at the home of the bride-elect's grandfather, Theodore W. Noyes.

Mrs. Pepper's Guests Leaving

With a bevy of attractive houseguests and a husband who is convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital, pretty Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, of Florida, has had no time to worry about the heat.

The Senator, who recently underwent an operation, is much improved.

Leaving today for her home at Tallahassee, Fla., is Mrs. Rainey Cawthon, who has been visiting Mrs. Pepper in her apartment here the last week. Mrs. Cawthon's sister, Miss Virginia Payne, also has been stopping with Mrs. Pepper.

En route to the New York World's Fair last week, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Snyder, of Jacksonville, Fla., sister and brother-in-law of Mrs. Pepper, stopped in Washington for several days. Mrs. Pepper and the Senator accompanied the Snyders to the fair. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Snyder stopped off at Clearfield, Pa., where they were the guests of Mr. Snyder's mother, Mrs. Cora Snyder, at her home there.

Eleanor Thomson To Be Wed Sept. 9

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig Thomson, of Westfield, N. J., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor L. Thomson, to William Daly Phelan, also of Westfield, son of Mrs. William D. Phelan, of Washington. The ceremony will take place at the Thomson home on September 9.

Miss Thomson will be attended by Mrs. Robert D. Mason, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Arthur Clow, of Short Hills, will be best man for Mr. Phelan.

Cores Leave Today On Trip to Canada

Mrs. Mildred Hoyle Core and her daughter, Natalie, will leave today for Becket, Mass., where they will pick up Mrs. Core's other daughter, Mary Core, who has been stopping at Howry Hundred with Miss Mary Howry.

They will motor from Massachusetts to Montreal, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ford, son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. Core. Mr. Ford is in the foreign service.

Hurleys and Rohdes Visiting in New York

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley are spending several days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York from their country home in Leesburg, Va.

Brig. Gen. Tyler, Bride Will Live In Mississippi

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Max Tyler, who were married Friday in St. Paul's Church, Hudson Falls, N. Y., will make their home in Vicksburg, Miss., after a brief wedding trip in the Adirondacks. Gen. Tyler was recently appointed president of the Mississippi River Commission. The bride, who is the former Miss Frances Hinkebein, has been with the Army Board Engineers here until recently.

The Rev. J. E. Surprenant officiated at their wedding, which was attended only by members of the bridegroom's immediate family.

Swezeys Name Son 'Junior'

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dwight Swezey are receiving congratulation on birth of a son August 7 at Garfield Hospital. The child will be named Robert Dwight Swezey, jr.

Mrs. Swezey is the former Miss Helen Brereton, daughter of Capt. William D. Brereton, who is now serving as United States Naval Attache at the embassy in Buenos Aires, and Mrs. Brereton. She is a sister of Miss Nancy Brereton.

Representative Here

Representative Joseph E. Casey has returned to Washington for a fortnight and is at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Helvering Back From West

Mrs. Guy T. Helvering has returned to Washington from a trip to the West Coast, accompanied by her sisters, Mrs. C. J. D. Koester and Mrs. A. J. Scott, of Marysville, Kans. They will be her guests at the Mayflower Hotel before going to New York to see the Fair. Mr. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, made the trip West with his wife but returned two weeks ago.

Mrs. Koester's son, Charles Koester, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Helvering at the Mayflower, will return Friday from a trip to Europe. He is executive assistant to the Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring.

Officials to Take Part in Fair Day

Many persons prominent in the Capital's civic and social life will go to New York on Saturday, September 9, to take part in District of Columbia Day at the World's Fair.

Among those who have already arranged a one-day or week-end visit to New York at that time are Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, Col. and Mrs. David McCoach, jr., Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. William, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert L. Cox, Dr. and Mrs. E. Milburn Colvin, Col. Harrison Brand, jr., and Mrs. Brand, Mr. and Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Karr, Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Somerville, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Brown.

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman of the committee on arrangements for District Day, heads a large group of others who will be on hand for the festivities honoring the District of Columbia at the World's Fair.

600 Invited to Leesburg Dance Friday To Benefit Loudoun County Hospital

MORE THAN SIX HUNDRED invitations have been sent out for the subscription dance to be held at the Auditorium in Leesburg on Friday night for the benefit of the Loudoun County Hospital. Many people are planning to spend the week-end in Leesburg, Middleburg and the surrounding countryside.

Pere Wilmer heads the committee on arrangements. He has engaged the orchestra from the George Washington Hotel in Winchester to furnish the music. Miss Peggy Wilmer and Miss Betsy Rust are in charge of invitations and are working hard to make the party a great success. Chaperoning the dance will be Mrs. Pere Wilmer, Mrs. William Rust, Mrs. J. R. H. Alexander and Mrs. Robert H. Fletcher. Miss Jane Rust is giving a dinner party for some of her friends before the dance at her home near Leesburg.

MRS. CHARLES GREEN TURNER, of White Hall, S. C., and Mrs. R. Beverley Herbert, of Columbia, S. C., have sent out invitations to a dance in honor of their daughters, Miss Lelia Turner and Miss Mary Herbert, for Saturday night from 9 until 1 o'clock at Rockley House, the summer home of Mrs. Turner at The Plains, Va.

Miss Turner's house guests for the week-end will be Miss Mary Turner Brown and Robert Brown, of Wilmington, Del. Also visiting her will be Miss Elizabeth V. Warden, of Washington, and Overton P. Dennis, of Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Beverley Herbert, who are spending several months at their summer home, Woodside, near Delaplane, with their family, Miss Georgia Herbert, James Herbert and Beverley Herbert, jr., will have a number of house guests this week-end. They will include Miss Marianna Bush and Miss Jane Bush, of Augusta, Ga.; Miss Kathleen Herbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Herbert, of Toronto, Canada, and Carlton Rutledge, jr., of Charlottesville.

MRS. FAIRFAX HARRISON will entertain the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club at her home, Belvoir House, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Thomas Wheelwright will give a talk and Miss Lilias Janney will also speak, her subject being "A Trip to England." She will tell particularly about the gardens she saw on her recent visit there. There will be flower arrangements by the members, to be judged on originality, and supper will be served afterward.

Bach-Hansen Rites Sept. 9

John V. Hansen has returned to his apartment at the Shoreham Hotel after an eight-week trip through the parks of the Western United States, where he made a series of colored motion pictures.

After a short stop in the Capital Mr. Hansen will leave for Philadelphia, where he and Miss Anne Bach, of that city, will be married September 9 in an afternoon ceremony at St. Clement's Church. Although the wedding itself is to be informal, and the couple will have only two attendants, a large reception is planned afterward at the Berkley Hotel in Philadelphia.

Among Washington people expecting to attend are Lieut. Col. J. F. Moriarity, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Crane, Dr. and Mrs. Roy L. Sexton and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Rice, as well as members of the Danish Legation staff, as both Mr. Hansen and Miss Bach are of Danish families.

Also among guests will be Col. Roy W. Winton, managing director of the Amateur Cinema League, of which Mr. Hansen is vice president, and K. V. Hansen, of the staff of Berlingske, the leading Danish newspaper.

Following the wedding, Mr. Hansen and his bride will leave for the West, where he will "shoot" some more colored pictures of the various parks. In November the couple will sail for Honolulu, where they will spend the winter.

Dr. Carlson Weds Chevy Chase Girl

Mr. and Mrs. William R. deLashmutt, of Chevy Chase, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jean Ramsburgh, and Dr. Carl Edwin Carlson, of Baltimore and New Haven, Conn., Saturday afternoon, August 19, in Baltimore. Present at the ceremony were William R. deLashmutt, jr., brother of the bride, and Miss Rebekah deLashmutt, aunt of the bride. Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Carlson left for a motor trip through New England.

Mrs. Carlson is a graduate of the Peabody Conservatory of Baltimore. Dr. Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Augustus Carlson, of New Haven, is a graduate of Johns Hopkins and also of the University of Maryland Medical School.

Woodward Due Back Today

Stanley Woodward, of the State Department, is expected to return today from a vacation in Salzburg, Germany, where he and his wife have a chalet. Mrs. Woodward and their children will join him here later.

During his absence Mr. Woodward's house in Georgetown is being occupied by George Howe, who will continue to stay there a while longer, having leased his home to friends until the autumn. He will then be jointed by Mrs. Howe, who with her two daughters is spending the summer at Bristol, R. I.

Mrs. Howe will have as her guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., of Washington. During their stay the three hope to attend some of the matches which are featuring Tennis Week at Newport. Mr. and Mrs. Burling have been at Watch Hill, R. I., where Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Perin, the latter's parents, are spending the summer.

John R. McLeans Attendants at Maine Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean were the only attendants at the wedding in Bar Harbor, Me., Monday night of Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks Phipps, of Philadelphia and Newport, R. I., to Edward J. Reeves, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Reeves have been the guests of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at her summer estate in Bar Harbor. They were married by Municipal Judge Harry M. Conners.

The marriage of the former Mrs. Phipps to Thomas Phipps ended in divorce. The bride is the daughter of George Brooks, of Philadelphia. Mr. Reeves is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Reeves, of New York.

Red Cross Opens Roll Call Office

The official opening of roll call headquarters yesterday marked District Red Cross observance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the formation of the International Red Cross. Open house followed an international broadcast early in the afternoon which commemorated the signing of the Treaty of Geneva three-quarters of a century ago. A small party of Red Cross chapter and roll call officials listened in from roll call headquarters, 1725 I street northwest.

General Chairman Edgar Morris and Mrs. Morris received more than 400 men and women who have volunteered to work in the annual campaign for memberships, September 28 to October 19. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Tyree Rivers, widow of the late Brig. Gen. Rivers.

Mrs. Rivers will act as official hostess at headquarters in the drive. She is chairman of the Catholic Church unit of the professional committee for the roll call.

In serving punch, Mrs. Rivers used a handsome silver ladle which survived the San Francisco earthquake. This ladle, she said, was the sole possession she and Gen. Rivers were able to salvage from the destruction.

Among Red Cross officials attending the open house were Richard F. Allen, Ernest J. Swift, J. Harrison Heckman, H. C. Thompson, and Mrs. Charles Dillon.

Symingtons Quit Manhattan For St. Louis

Former Songstress And Family to Live In City Outskirts

Forsaking the bright lights of Manhattan, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Symington will leave shortly for St. Louis, Mo., to make their home. The Symingtons have purchased a place on the outskirts of the city.

Known as society's No. 1 songstress for many a day, the departure of Eve Symington from the environs of smarter New York will be a jolt to cafe society.

The daughter of ultraconservative Representative James Wadsworth and Mrs. Wadsworth, of Geneseo, N. Y., further distinguished herself as being one of the few ever to go on record as having turned down a fat Hollywood movie contract. For a long time it was career versus domesticity with the chic Mrs. Symington, but domesticity finally won out this last season when she refused to renew her contract as singer in the Sert Room of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Following in his mother's footsteps is young Jimmie Symington, who has made quite a hit with the records he has been doing. Jimmie, however, leans toward carols and hunting songs rather than the torchy tunes that made his mother famous. He will accompany the family to St. Louis while Tim, another son, will remain East in school.

Representative and Mrs. Wadsworth were recent visitors at Berry Hill, Newport, R. I., where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, of Washington. The Wadsworths are now in Saratoga for the remainder of the racing season. They are stopping with Mrs. Payne Whitney while at the Spa.

Randolph Pair On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Randolph, who were married last Saturday, are now on a wedding trip. The bride is the former Miss Virginia Catlett, daughter of F. W. Catlett, formerly of Seattle, Wash., and now of this city. Mr. Randolph is the son of Alan F. Randolph, of Montclair, N. J.

They were married at the Harbor Homestead Gardens, in Basin Harbor, Va., in a setting of pine bough and gladioli, with the shore of Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks in the background. The Rev. P. C. Ladd, of Burlington, Vt., officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white lace princess gown with a train and a brief veil, attached to a cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Dorothea L. Catlett. John W. F. Randolph was best man for his brother, and the ushers were David Gilbert and Armand W. Droz.

A reception followed the ceremony.

Eight et Forty To Elect Tonight

The fourteenth annual convention of the District of Columbia Salon of the Eight et Forty Club will be held tonight and tomorrow at the Hotel Washington. Departmental Chapeau Edith Warren will preside and Chapeau Passe Mabel F. Staub and Partner Marie Hargy will be secretaries.

Miss Staub is chairman of the convention. Others working for its success include Clara Humphries, Catherine Compton, Ellen Louise Warren, Virginia McCarthy, Emily J. Carey, Dorothy B. Harper and Edith Landvoigt.

Registration will take place at 7 p. m. today, with nomination and election of officers for 1939-40 later tonight. The officers will be installed by National Chapeau Passe Dorothy B. Harper tomorrow night.

Mrs. Morgan to Sail On Queen Mary Today

Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan will sail today on the liner Queen Mary for England. She will later go to Geneva to attend the annual meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

Following her stay in Geneva Mrs. Morgan plans to visit London, Paris and perhaps Berlin. She will return here in the fall to resume lectures on current events in Europe.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Anniversary
(A Woman's Soliloquy)

I

Why do I receive with such strange composure
News that a year ago sent my heart fluttering, my blood racing,
That caused a paralyzing fear to suffuse and confound me,
And brought a haunting sense of guilt to bedevil my days?

II

But now headlines blaze forth their reports of new crises,
The ominous-toned voice of the radio gives warning
That these are the gravest of all times, and yet oddly,
I read and I listen and am only sad, stoic, resigned.

III

I go about my small duties as if they were things of importance,
And I do not keep asking myself agonizingly,
"What is the use?" as I did on the last end of August,
Nor keep sadly pondering, "What is this poor thing we call man?"

IV

I plan for tomorrow, seemingly unaware of the terror
Rising grimly upon the far eastern horizon,
I go to parties, buy clothes, forward my petty ambitions,
And talk of "next year," and the next, and of better days just beyond.

V

Can it be that having once seen the wolf silenced,
I no longer have fear of his fangs or his growling?
No! Down in my heart beneath the lacquer of calmness
Dwells the tragic awareness of a red cross in the sky.

VI

Can it be that my conscience has shriveled and hardened,
That I have grown callous of feeling or that I've retreated
Into my own small, selfish world of ostrich-like safety,
Or have I surrendered to the gray cult of despair?

VII

No, that cannot be; it is more like the calmness
That comes in a house of death, where the dark enemy
Must be met with a dignified strength; where a power, mysterious,
Sustains us to carry on life's tasks, its routine.

VIII

No, it is not despair, nor surrender, but rather the knowing
That in small as in great things, this thin thread of living
Must be carried on and on—no matter whatever may happen—
Because life in some form will always be greater than death.

Icebox Helps Summer Belles Keep Beauty

The ice box can play a part in summer beauty treatments. Beauty experts suggest that you banish heat-weariness by frequent cleansing, so essential during warm weather. The proper cleansing can be a delightful experience, either as a conscientious beauty treatment several times a day, or when you are headachy and irritable from the heat—or as a quick pick-up treatment before applying a new make-up on any occasion.

It is very simple. Leave a jar of cleansing cream and skin lotion in the ice box until you are ready to use them. Have two generous-sized pads of absorbent cotton squeezed out of cold water. Moisten one with the chilled skin lotion and add the cold cleansing cream. Apply it to the skin with gentle upward motions. It liquifies immediately, yet feels incredibly smooth, refreshing and is wonderfully fragrant. Remove with tissues and repeat to soothe thoroughly and deeply cleanse the skin. Then with the other pad moistened with skin lotion, gently pat until your face feels firm and cool, and a faint glow comes to your cheeks. Until you have tried it yourself, you cannot guess how restful and relaxing it is, nor how good it is for your skin.

Broiled Lobster Says Lawyer D. M. Patrick

Favorite foods of Washington men are presented daily in this column.

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

DUKE M. PATRICK, although a young man, has a string of accomplishments that would justify a graybeard. Born on a farm at Paragon, Ind., he first acquired a degree at Purdue University before receiving the degree of doctor of jurisprudence at the University of Michigan.

Mr. Patrick

As general counsel of the former Federal Radio Commission Mr. Patrick was responsible for much of the fundamental law now in effect. He had the distinction of being the youngest general counsel in any of Uncle Sam's departments. With a string of victories in the field of radio jurisprudence, Mr. Patrick resigned as general counsel to join the Hogan & Hartson law firm, where he is now an authority in the field of radio law.

When not busy with the rights of broadcasting, Mr. Patrick is most certain to be found playing golf at the Burning Tree Golf Club, where he is considered a topnotcher on the greens. He is such an avowed golfer that when he goes on vacation, because of hay fever, he chooses a climate where no pollen can reach him, so that the game can go on.

Mr. Patrick says that eating is not one of the greatest interests in life—he is one who eats to live—yet, when he came in from a day of golf recently he was enthusiastic about eating broiled lobster. With broiled lobster he likes French fried potatoes, head lettuce with Roquefort dressing, rum buns and iced tea or beer. There are no desserts on his preferred list of foods.

I asked Mrs. Patrick if she had any special technique in broiling lobster to her husband's taste and she gave me the following directions:

Broiled Lobster

Have a 2-pound lobster prepared at the fish market. Broil ten minutes on the flesh side, then seven minutes on the shell side. Baste the flesh side with melted butter and broil this two or three minutes longer. On removing from the fire, crack the large claws further, place on a hot serving platter, sprinkle over with salt and pepper, and serve with ½ cup melted butter.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Twice Disappointed in Love, Sailor Gets Engaged On Rebound; Should He Marry the Girl?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The writer of this letter is 29 years of age and has spent nine of the last eleven years at sea. Like all sailors, he has had many girl friends but his occupation kept him from considering marriage seriously—until about four years ago. He was in the U. S. Navy then. An increase in pay and transfer for a tour of duty in Hawaii caused him to dash to the East Coast and back, to propose marriage to his current girl friend.

An agreement was effected whereby she was to join him out there and be married. But when he had settled in Hawaii and had sent for her, she found many reasons for postponing her coming. He accepted her excuses for eight months and then, in desperation, demanded a showdown. She did not even show him the courtesy of answering his letter. This soured him on girls, so he let them definitely alone, and fell into companionship with a married couple.

When this companionship was about three months old, the new friend's wife, while on a hike in the hills, accidentally tripped and fell into the arms of the writer of this letter. There was an immediate mutual reaction from the contact; a reaction so strong that it engulfed them completely and literally swept them off their feet. Such desire, such tenderness, such mutual understanding was born of that momentary contact that they were oblivious, for a long time, of everything else in the world.

Sanity returned to them eventually, however, and with its return they realized that all they had found in each other would have to be put aside. She had children; her husband worshiped her, and even though he knew what had happened, he trusted them both. So the writer of this letter left the islands. Luckily, his enlistment was almost up. As soon as he reached the mainland, he took his discharge and spent the next year aboard rusty tramp steamers, not caring whether he lived or died.

Time brought enough peace that he thought he could begin life over again. So he left the sea and came here to work . . . He tried to become interested in girls again . . . became partially interested in several. One of these girls was suffering from the effects of an unfortunate affair. He tried to help her forget and the other girls drifted away, so that he was seeing this one constantly.

Then he discovered that this girl was in love with him, experiencing the same wild emotional upheaval that he had experienced in Hawaii. He analyzed his feelings and found that, while he felt he loved her very much, he was unable to match her emotions. After weighing everything he decided that the love he had known in Hawaii comes to a man but once, so he told her everything and asked her to marry him. She accepted and set a date but a few weeks off for the marriage.

Her people strongly objected to the union. The couple agreed to the mother's request to wait an indefinite period. They have waited for six months now and there has been a growing conviction in both that he does not love her enough to go through with it. This arises from their failure to achieve mutual understanding. At times it takes them hours to explain some trivial misunderstanding. Despite the fact that both are strong willed, they do not lose their tempers during these discussions. Neither wants to break the engagement, but both want to do the right thing.

The writer of this letter is very troubled, for he wants to do what is fair. He realizes that you will perhaps brand him as the fickle, chaotic person he feels that he is. But he still sincerely wishes to marry this girl if there is any chance of his giving her happiness, and subsequently receiving some for himself. He has told the whole story and would appreciate your opinion very much.

TROUBLED.

Spurious Attraction

DEAR TROUBLED: Somehow, I do NOT get the impression that you are "a fickle, chaotic person." On the contrary, I get the distinct impression that you are a rather fine man, whom fate has been dealing some belly blows. But I have a further conviction that you would be baiting misfortune in making the mariage you are now considering.

Your wish to be scrupulously fair is admirable; yet your common sense is asserting itself in seeking to establish some guarantee of personal happiness, in case you should make it your mission in life to try to give happiness to the girl.

If the marriage seems inadvisable, on sober second thought, you are under no obligation to make a martyr of yourself by going through with it, only in order to keep a tentative pledge which the girl's family has deliberately obstructed. The engagement will have justified itself if it discloses the fact that you are essentially incompatible personalities—as you seem to be.

As I see this situation, your feeling for the girl—which you mistake for love—is largely compounded of gratitude and pity. You are grateful to her for caring so much, and your own reversals in love have caused you (a) to pity her whom love torments, and (b) to be sensitively reluctant to visit additional pain upon her, through denying her hopes.

However, it is not so much the quality of your feeling for her which seems to make marriage inadvisable as it is the fact that you two appear to have so little in common with which to build an enduring and mutually beneficent relationship. Granted that you may never love again quite as you loved in Hawaii, nevertheless you would be rash in the extreme in marrying out of pity, or "on the rebound," as the saying goes."

That "love which comes to a man but once"—while a glorious experience that may seem, when shared, to render all other practical considerations of secondary importance—is not indispensable to satisfactory marriage. Happy marriages can be made without it. But where it is lacking the union must be sustained by such solid compensatory attributes as common interests, cordial friendship, mutual respect, effortless congeniality, and warm and readily accessible reciprocal understanding, if the relationship is to endure and thrive and bless both parties. And there is no evidence to indicate that such points of psychic contact exist in this exchange.

For brevity's sake, I have omitted that portion of your letter which tells the difference in racial traditions and religious beliefs. But this would offer an additional serious handicap to marriage, particularly when coupled with your fundamentally antagonistic personalities, which can bridge a difference in viewpoint only after endless hours of discussion. Whatever reconciliation is achieved by such means can only be superficial and transient; a matter of conceding a point in the hope of gaining a point, rather than a token of genuinely improved mutual understanding.

As I see this situation the most that you have in common is past heartbreak and present hunger for love. And I do not believe it affords a sufficient foundation for marriage. I think each of you must look further for a satisfactory mate.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Before the Days of Decibels:

Antinoise Drives Date Back To Greeks in 720 B. C.

M. C. Quayle, Engineer of Bureau of Standards, Measures Auto Noise

Bureau of Standards Marshals Its Delicate Instruments to Help Hazen Subdue Jitter-Producing Sounds

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The next time you jump nearly out of your shirt when some playful wag (drat him) blasts an auto horn at your coat-tails or a street car switch catches you unawares, count 10 and remember even the Greeks tried to find words strong enough to express your reaction.

When Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen issued his recent edict against noise—especially of the sudden variety—he joined a roster of sensitive souls who have battled jitter-provoking sounds since 720 B. C. His name may go down in history with Carlyle, who dreaded the noise made by crowing roosters; with Schopenhauer, German philosopher, who was tortured by the cracking of horsemen's whips; Herbert Spencer, the great thinker, who plugged his ears with wool, and Mark Twain, who was constantly annoyed by sounds of everyday living.

But Commissioner Hazen's antinoise crusade has enlisted support from more modern quarters and the United States Bureau of Standards has joined in more or less of a technical capacity.

Greeks Started It

The bureau opened its files to a Post researcher yesterday and disclosed there is more behind this noise bug-a-boo than actually reaches the ears. In fact, the world has been trying to accustom itself to over-abundances of sound for so long that we moderns can toss off noises that would have deafened our ancestors.

There is evidence that steps to abate noise were taken by the Greeks several centuries before the Christian era. The cultured Greeks of Sybaris—founded in 720 B. C.—apparently were allergic to even the noises of those times. They never had heard a street car with a flat wheel nor a pneumatic drill—but they didn't like what noises they had, and promptly took action. It was because they acted, according to legend, that Sybaris grew into a great and wealthy city and its citizens were without nerves.

Bue even efforts of the Greeks didn't leave a lasting remedy for Commissioner Hazen's use, so Bureau of Standards officials brought out more up-to-date information anent the endless fight against unnecessary thumps, rattles, blasts and hoots.

Science Marches On

Time and science have done considerable marching since the days when the Greeks were annoyed and today we know through mediums of measurement, which of our pet-peeve noises is the loudest.

Noise, by modern means, is recorded in decibels—a decibel being a unit used to describe or measure the amount of sound just as temperature is measured in degrees. The threshhold of sound starts at zero and the limit of your ears' endurance is 130 decibels.

An official study of sound in Washington has never been made, bureau engineers said, but surveys have been conducted in various cities of similar size. For instance, Commissioner Hazen's particular dislike—the average auto horn—registers 100 decibels at about 20 feet, enough to bring a strong desire for mayhem to anyone on the receiving end of a sudden blast.

How Noises Compare

The rustle of leaves in a gentle breeze—10.
Average whisper—10.
Soft radio music—35.
Average office—55.
Average busy street—60.
Stenographic room—70.
Police whistles—74 to 82.
Piledriver—87.
Express train—105.
Airplane motor, 18 feet from propeller—115.

The threshold of feeling—or when sound begins to hurt the ears—runs about 120 decibels, engineers report. But a decibel doesn't register the actual intensity of sound. It is merely a measure for the ear, while intensity is measured by instruments and computed into decibels. For instance, a sound registering between 60 and 80 decibels would be from 1,000,000 to 100,000,000 times the intesity of sound at the threshold of hearing.

Brain Pressure Rises

And here's what happens to you when that playful wag (drat him again) bursts a paper bag in your ear (some fun): Tests with a bag show that the brain pressure is increased four times above normal when the bag explodes, remains there for 7 seconds and doesn't return fully to normal for nearly half a minute.

Maybe if Commissioner Hazen spreads his noise dragnet far enough, even leathered-eared contractors will give in and erect signs similar to one posted by a builder in New York at the height of an antinoise drive. It read:

"Our sincere apologies to our neighbors for the unavoidable annoyance this work must occasion."

Brown Asks New Precinct In Benning

106 More Police Urged in Budget; Fire Estimate $2,434,450

Funds for a new precinct station at Benning and 106 additional policemen are included in 1941 budget estimate of $3,625,461, submitted yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan police superintendent.

At the same time Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter asked the District Commissioners to seek restoration of the jobs of 15 privates whose resignations this year may not be filled under a provision of the 1940 appropriation act.

Maj. Brown's estimate, which represents an increase of $237,826 over the present appropriation, also includes funds for 17 clerks at police headquarters.

To man the new station, which would be located at Forty-second street and Benning road northeast, Maj. Brown requested one captain, two lieutenants, three sergeants and 40 privates. Sixty additional privates are needed elsewhere because "at no time are there sufficient patrolmen to assign to all beats, and many policemen are forced to cover two or three beats," Brown stated.

Special Duties Cited

"It is found that there are many details of policemen to various duties incident to ceremonies, legations, embassies, emergency situations, escorts, protection of school children in the morning, afternoon, and recess times and handling of traffic during the rush hours," he explained.

Chief Porter has requested an appropriation of $2,434,450 for next year, an increase of $51,460 over the present appropriation. Of the reduction of 15 privates, Chief Porter said:

"This reduction in manpower has greatly curtailed the granting of annual leave and has also caused the department to operate almost constantly at the absolute minimum strength. This has caused severe physical strain on each unit so reduced by this restriction. It is necessary and desirable that the 15 vacancies be filled in order to render proper fire service to the community."

$5,350,000 for Salaries

The appropriation act provides that no appointment should be made during the year in the grade of private until 16 vacancies occur. Chief Porter has requested $81,150 for fire apparatus, including two combination hose wagons and an aerial hook and ladder truck.

The break-down of the police estimate follows: Salaries for officers and members, $3,152,038; personal services, $171,380; fuel, $7,000; stations and grounds, $30,000; erection of a new precinct station house, $36,500; contingent expenses, $83,508; motor vehicles, $70,000; uniforms, $56,975; House of Detention, $18,060.

For the fire department the breakdown is: Salaries for officers and members, $2,202,000; personal services, $5,980; repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds, $20,000; uniforms, $27,820; repairs to apparatus, $37,500; hose, $15,000; fuel, $22,500; contingent expenses, $22,500; additional fire-fighting apparatus, $81,150.

Three Children Hit by Automobiles

Three children were injured by automobiles on District streets yesterday.

Five-year-old Ronald Hensley, 805 F street southwest, and 2½-year-old Robert Moy, 1316 Eleventh street southeast, were struck by cars near their homes. The Hensley boy was treated for minor bruises. The Moy child suffered leg bruises and body lacerations.

Roth M. Brown, 12, of 1024 Third street southwest, received hip bruises when he was struck by an automobile while roller skating near his home. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

World Needs Missionaries, Says Fr. Thill

Kansas Bishop Tells Catholics Nations Have Been Organized To Destroy Almighty

The modern world needs missionaries more than at any time in history, the Most Rev. Frank A. Thill, D. D., bishop of Concordia, Kans., told more than 2,000 delegates at the opening session of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade convention at Catholic University last night.

"There are as many souls in the world today who have not heard the word of Christ as there were men living in His day," declared Bishop Thill. "For the first time in the history of the world, men have organized governments and conducted wars to kill Almighty God and to destroy the very memory of the Lord, Christ."

Leading Crusader

Bishop Thill was introduced by the Very Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Freking, S. T. D., national secretary of the crusade and executive chairman of the convention. Mgr. Freking described the bishop's work as a young man in organizing the crusade in 1918 and termed him the "leading crusader in the United States."

A message from Pope Pius XII, bestowing the apostolic benediction upon the officers and delegates of the convention and on their deliberations was read by the Very Rev. Mgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities, in the absence of John W. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, who was prevented by illness from being present.

"The Holy Father commends the zeal and accomplishments of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade," the message read, over the signature of the papal secretary of state, Cardinal Maglione.

Greeted by Mgr. Corrigan

The Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, S. T. D., rector of Catholic University, welcomed the delegates to the university for their three-day convention, the eleventh biennial gathering since the first was held there in 1920. "Every one of you should feel at home here," said Mgr. Corrigan, pointing out that graduates of the university had taken a leading part in mission work.

"There never was a time when the letter of the Gospel could do so much in any place or time as it could do today in this country of ours," the rector concluded.

Totalitarianism Threat

Bishop Thill also emphasized the importance of home missionary work, declaring that "there is no distinction between home and foreign missions."

"'Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make ye free' is a sermon that needs to be preached . . . in the parliaments of so-called Christian governments where the heresy of totalitarianism threatens even those who glory in their democracies," he said.

A greeting to the convention from the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious was brought by Frater Timothy Donahue, S. A., president of the conference, who declared it is "the glorious embodiment of the real mission spirit which courses through the veins of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade." The opening prayer was led by the Most Rev. Francis J. L. Beckman, D. D., Archbishop of Dubuque and chairman of the national executive board of the crusade.

Also on the platform were the Most Rev. Eugene J. McGuiness, D. D., Bishop of Raleigh, N. C., who will preach the sermon at the pontifical field mass at 10 a. m. today at the university stadium, and the Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas J. McDonnell, national director of the Propagation of the Faith, who will address a meeting of the Missionary Union of the Clergy at 2 p. m. today in McMahon Hall auditorium.

Seal Decides To Prosecute Traffic Aide

M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic, if convicted on charges filed yesterday by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal as the result of an auto accident two weeks ago, will face a maximum penalty of $300 or ten days in jail under the District traffic act.

Both Eldridge and Alan Whitlock, driver of a second car in a three-car crash at Forty-fourth street and Cathedral avenue, must stand trial on charges of approaching an intersection "without due diligence," Seal ruled. Miss Kathleen Duncan, driver of the third car, escaped court action because her car was standing still, Seal said.

Negligence Seen

"The corporation counsel's decision to prosecute Eldridge and Whitlock followed a meeting last Friday in which the accident was discussed with principals and Police Court prosecutors. In a memorandum to his assistants, at court, Seal said:

"I have given careful consideration to the statements made by all of the witnesses in the Eldridge-Whitlock collision case. It seems to me that the accident occurred by reason of the negligence of the operators of the Eldridge and Whitlock cars.

"The statements clearly show that the vision at the northeast corner of Cathedral avenue and Forty-fourth street is obstructed by a hedge 6 feet high, and it occurs to me that if due dilligence had been exercised by both drivers, the accident could have been avoided.

Would File Charges

"In view of this conclusion, appropriate charges should be filed against Mr. Eldridge and Mr. Whitlock. I suggest you advise Mr. Eldridge and Mr. Whitlock to appear and make oaths to proper traffic violations, at which time you should issue informations based upon section 22b of the traffic and motor vehicle regulations for the District of Columbia which is as follows:

"'No person shall drive a vehicle upon a highway at a greater speed than is reasonable and prudent, and a due regard to the traffic, surface and width of the highway, and the hazards at intersections, and any other conditions then existing.'"

Eldridge last night refused to comment on the charges. He explained, however, it was his first accident in many years of driving and he would accept Seal's ruling and appear in court.

Third of D. C. Relief Clients Moved in 1939, Report Shows

One out of every three persons on relief in the District moved at least once or was evicted from his home in the first six months of this year, a report disclosed yesterday.

Otto J. Cass, relief director, in his first report to the Board of Public Welfare, stated that 2,105 clients moved 2,405 times in that period. Three hundred moved more than once, 250 moved twice, 42 three times, six moved four times and two moved five times, he said.

He said 1,787 cases received reduced grants in July, due to the new act limiting payments in the various relief categories.

The maximum grant which may be allowed for old-age or blind assistance is $30 per month. For aid to dependent children and general public assistance the maximum grant may not be more than $24 to a single person, not more than $30 to a family of two, and not more than $6 to each additional person in the family under 16 years of age; and not to exceed a total of $60 a month to any one family.

Cass said that for 203 aid to dependent children cases and 227 general public assistance cases, not only were the grants reduced but many persons in the families over 16 years of age were eliminated entirely in computing the amount of grant.

He said whenever a client moved either because of eviction or of his own accord, the case worker must verify the new address and the amount of rent. Because of this, considerable clerical work has resulted.

Capital News In Brief

Old Timers' Night will be observed tonight at St. Dominic's Priory carnival, being held through Saturday at the church grounds, 516 Sixth street southwest.

The Very Rev. William Marrin, O. P., pastor, has invited all former parishioners to be his guests at the homecoming. The program will be presented by Frank Goran, Stephan Laut, Miss Catherine O'Connor, the barber shop quartette, and the K. of C. Band.

Long Trek Futile

A 20-year-old youth hitchhiked from his home town in Pennsylvania to Capitol Hill yesterday, only to discover that Representative Flannery was back in Pennsylvania, only 20 miles away from the youth's home.

The youth explained he had been dishonorably discharged from the Army after nearly a year's service because authorities had learned of a youthful indiscretion which he had failed to report on joining the Army.

He came to Washington, seeking Flannery's aid to get back into the ranks. On learning Flannery was home, the former soldier immediately started the long trek back.

Screams Rout Assailant

Screams of Mrs. Margaret Warner, 25, of 5040 New Hampshire avenue northwest, last night drove off an assailant who accosted her in the hallway outside her apartment door.

Mrs. Warner told police she was returning to the apartment after mailing a letter, and was about to open the door, when a man approached and without a word picked her up in his arms. When she screamed, he dropped her and ran. She is the wife of a Republican Congressional Committee employe.

Recovered Body Believed Buehne's

The body of a man found in Herring Bay yesterday afternoon was identified tentatively last night as that of Ollie F. Buehne, of 1812 Upshur street northeast, Internal Revenue Bureau official, who drowned Sunday near Galesville, Md.

FSCC Plan May Feed 15,000 Pupils

Officials Seek Way For D. C. to Take Full Advantage Of New Program

Expansion of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation program will make possible distribution of free lunches to 15,000 school children here in the coming academic year, it was revealed last night.

Plans for an increase in the number of free school lunches to provide for all undernourished District school children will be discussed Friday by WPA, Board of Public Welfare and public assistance division officials with representatives of the Federal Surplus commodities Corporation.

The meeting was called in an effort to overcome difficulties that would prevent the District from taking full advantage of the expanded free lunch program announced for the Nation by the FSCC yesterday. Three dificulties must be overcome before the program can take effect, according to Mrs. Mary Steele, director of WPA professional and service projects.

Three Dificulties Seen

Actually, the corporation provides most but not all of the food for the lunches. Milk and bread must be appropriated for independently.

An increase of personnel from 120 to 250 to prepare the increased number of lunches would be necessary.

Increased facilities for preparation of the food would be required. There is one central kitchen at present. This would have to be enlarged "100 per cent" or duplicated, it was said.

Consequently, before any such number of free lunches as contemplated by the corporation quota could be provided, additional appropriations would have to be found to finance the expansion here.

Might Feed 8,400

Despite the difficulties, Mrs. Steele said she was "very much in favor of the plan." Some of the money might be supplied from the appropriation for nursery schools in the WPA agency's budget which has not been used, she said.

With the additional staples supplied by the FSCC the District program undoubtedly would be expanded to provide at least for the 8,400 children certified by the Board of Education as undernourished.

Nationally, the FSCC's expanded program calls for supplying free lunches to nearly 5,000,000 undernourished school children in cooperation with WPA and local educational, civic and welfare agencies. Last year's program provided lunches for 800,000.

Three Arrests Bring Forfeitures of $6 As Hazen's Antinoise Crusade Goes On

Commissioner Hazen's new antinoise crusade netted three more arrests yesterday. Each of the accused, charged with unnecessary horn blowing, forfeited $2 collateral, police said.

The victims were Edward Smallwood, colored, 37, of 2402 Fourteenth street northwest, arrested near his home; Percy W. Meekins, 39, 4733 Conduit road northwest, arrested on M street, and Philip M. Triem, 25, 7615 Eastern avenue, arrested on Georgia avenue.

Add coincidence: The name of the policeman who arrested Meekins was Oscar Fuss, of the Seventh Precinct.

William J. Walsh, Attorney for ICC For 15 Years, Dies

William J. Walsh, who for 15 years was an attorney with the Interstate Commerce Commission, died yesterday at his home, 205 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, Md., after a long illness.

He was a graduate of Holy Cross College, Catholic University and Georgetown University Law School. He was born in Auburn, Me.

Surviving are his wife, Delphine Barr Walsh; a son, William, 10; a daughter, Margaret Angela, 8, and an uncle, William E. Walsh, of Auburn.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Friday at the Blessed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase, D. C. Burial will follow at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

School Site Shifts Asked by Hazen To Get 'Good Price'

Relocation of the Industrial Home School for White Children has been recommended to the Board of Public Welfare for consideration in the 1941 budget estimates, Commissioner Hazen revealed yesterday.

The school, now on "valuable" property on Wisconsin avenue, would be moved to the grounds now used by the Industrial Board for Colored Children in Blue Plains, Md., and the colored school would be transferred to District-owned property in Muirkirk, Md., under a plan suggested by Hazen.

The Commissioner said this would effect a great economy because the grounds at Muirkirk are not in use and the property on Wisconsin avenue, if sold, would bring a "good" price.

Ambers Regains Title as Armstrong Loses on Low-Hitting

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

14 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1939 X*

Referee Disregards Crowd, Penalizes Henry in 5 Rounds

Negro Suffers First Defeat in 47 Starts; Decision Is Unanimous; 29,088 Watch Battle At Yankee Stadium; Armstrong Fails to Follow Up His Chance for Knockout

By Bob Considine.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 22.—With the rule book and a good stout heart on his side, Lou Ambers, the Herkimer Hurricane, defeated Henry Armstrong here tonight and won back the lightweight championship of the world.

While the crowd heartily booed his passion for the letter of the law, Referee Arthur Donovan took 5 of the 15 rounds of the fight away from Armstrong for hitting Ambers below the belt line of his soggy purple trunks.

The decision left Armstrong with only the welterweight title remaining from the three crowns he amassed in a short year of unparalleled campaigning. He voluntarily gave up the featherweight title ten months ago, and planned to retire undefeated as lightweight king if he had successfully defended tonight the title he won a year ago from Ambers.

It was Armstrong's first loss in his last 47 fights, a winning streak that dates back to April, 1936, when he lost on a foul to Tony Chavez in St. Louis.

Even with the five foul rounds it was a close decision. Donovan gave Ambers eight rounds to Armstrong's seven, as did Judge Frank Fullam. Judge Bill Healy gave Ambers 11 rounds, Armstrong 3 and called 1 even.

Penalties Protested

The crowd of 29,088, which paid $137,925.77 at the "bucks" office, protested as each penalty was meted out to Henry, but at the end gave the new champion a substantial yell for an intelligent and always game fight.

The men will fight for the welterweight, or 147 pounds, title on November 1.

Mindful of the terrific heat, and the fact that Armstrong had to go into a steam-reducing cabinet this noon to make the 135-pound weight limit, Ambers let the little brown man carry the fight to him from start to finish.

Frequently Ambers let Armstrong maul and shove him against the ropes, and there Ambers would lean—almost contentedly—sliding Armstrong's busy punches and slapping the Negro's chops into a bloody pulp with crisp left hooks.

Armstrong carried the fight to Ambers all the way, and was a wornout and blood-leaking man at the end.

Hammering Henry got in the groove twice. In the fourth round he catapulted Ambers half through the ropes with a whistling little left hook and a good straight right to the jaw. Ambers escaped from the embrace of the ropes, and the blur of Henry's subsequent punches, plunged across the ring and slipped to one knee on the wet canvas of his corner. But when Henry closed in, snorting through his flat nose, to finish him off, Ambers took cool aim and hit Henry a lusty uppercut in the mouth.

Armstrong Arm-Weary

A curious thing then happened. Armstrong thought he heard the bell and started for his corner. Ambers, after a moment of hesitation, followed suit. Donovan frantically called them back to the wars and Ambers hit him a dozen punches to Henry's one, to wipe out the advantage Henry had amassed.

Again in the fourteenth, though arm-weary and sorely harassed by Donovan's zealous law enforcement, Armstrong recaptured his old-time aim. Ambers was leaning almost idly on the ropes, slapping Henry's bobbing head, when Henry feinted him and hit him a terrific right on the jaw.

The little Negro followed it up with a virile two-fisted attack to Ambers' head, but the cement in Lou's chin was firmer than Henry's fists.

Ambers finally got out of range and Armstrong, blind with fatigue, couldn't catch him.

Ambers was much the stronger at the end, and slapped Armstrong around at will in the fifteenth. Armstrong danced a tired, gory-faced little rumba to his corner at the final bell, but he had been hit by too many things, including rule nine, section four.

Crown Stolen From His Man, Cries Manager

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, charged tonight that the lightweight title was "stolen" from his man and threatened to "blow things in New York wide open."

"I thought Jesse James died years ago," big Eddie said, "but they must have had some of his ancestors around here tonight."

While Mead was screaming that Referee Arthur Donovan had no business taking five rounds from Armstrong because of low blows, the new champion, Lou Ambers, said:

"I'd have won it even easier without those rounds they gave me on rouls. He hurt me a couple of times and it weakened me a lot or I would have given him a worse beating."

Ambers Is Happy

Ambers was so happy at regaining the crown he did not want to talk. He preferred to sing "The Beer Barrel Polka" and everyone in his dressing room joined in.

In Armstrong's dressing room, Mead stormed around shouting his indignation.

"When I get through with this commission, there might not be any more boxing in New York," he said. "I'll take a delegation from Harlem to Albany and ask for an investigation."

Mead said that three weeks ago he had warned that something was going to happen tonight to take the title from Henry.

"Why," Eddie said, "one of the commissioners said at that time that Armstrong would lose six rounds on a foul—and that was three weeks ago. How could he know that if there wasn't something phoney about it?"

Claim Ambers Fouled

Mead and Armstrong, who lay there on the table with ice packs on his battered face, claimed that Ambers "fouled" for 15 rounds.

"He continually stuck his thumb in Henry's eyes," Mead said. "Ambers doesn't punch hard enough to damage them like that."

Armstrong agreed.

Asked whether Armstrong would defend his welterweight title against Ambers in November according to an agreement the fighters signed, Mead said:

"Let's wait and see what happens."

Donovan 'Knew' Henry Would Foul Out of His Title

Yankee Stadium, Aug. 22 (AP).—Referee Arthur Donovan, who penalized Henry Armstrong five rounds for low punching against Lou Ambers tonight, said he knew "that some day Henry would lose the lightweight title if he kept punching low."

"It had to be," he pointed out. "I knew Armstrong was going to do that some night, and that I'd have to penalize him."

Bill Brown, member of the New York State Athletic Commission, said: "I wouldn't have penalized Armstrong. I would have thrown him out of the ring."

Ted Williams Crosses Baseball 'Goal Line'

St. Louis, Aug. 22 (AP).—Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox's ambitious candidate for "rookie of the year," crossed a goal line today by becoming the first player in the major leagues to bat in 100 or more runs.

He hit a homer, a triple and a single to knock in four runs against the Browns and bring his total to 103. He also moved into a tie for third place among the American League's home run leaders.

Lou Gehrig Reported On Way to Recovery

Rochester, Minn., Aug. 22 (AP).—Lou Gehrig, famous New York Yankee first baseman, whose career was snapped short by a form of infantile paralysis attacking his spine, said today Mayo Clinic physicians told him he was making good progress in his fight against the affliction.

Gehrig said he expected to complete two days of examinations at the clinic late today, but was not planning to leave Rochester until Wednesday.

Chicago's 7-Game Run Halted as N. Y. Turns on Power; Russo Is Victor

Chicago, Aug. 22 (INS). — The mighty bats of the New York Yankees functioned perfectly under the arc lights tonight, the world champions exploding 14 hits including five home runs and whipping the Chicago White Sox, 14 to 5.

More than 50,000 customers jammed Comiskey Park and saw the Sox's seven-game winning streak halted at that figure.

A half hour before game time the park was filled, and it was estimated 10,000 customers were turned away.

Despite the final score the Sox made a fight of it until the seventh when Red Rolfe started the carnage by belting out a homer that broke a 5-to-5 tie. Three more Yankee runs in the eighth and five in the ninth turned what had been a tight ball game into a rout.

Rolfe's round-tripper was his twelfth of the season. Frankie Crosetti hit his seventh, Joe DiMaggio his nineteenth, Joe Gordon his twentieth, and Babe Dahlgren his fourteenth. The five homers gave the New Yorkers 22 in their last ten games, a new major league record. Tonight's four-baggers accounted for eight of the first nine Yankee runs.

Eric McNair accounted for two of the Sox's five runs with his fourth-inning home run with a man on base.

Victims of the Yankee attack were Bill Dietrich, who lasted but three innings; Johnny Marcum and Clint Brown, with Dietrich being charged with the loss. Mario Russo, rookie southpaw, went all the way for the Yanks, allowing but seven hits, of which McNair and Luke Appling bagged two each.

3 Top Seeded Players Win In Net Play

Albert Ritzenberg, Ray Stocklinski and C. Alphonso Smith seeded one, two and three respectively, reached the semifinals of the Government tennis tournament played on the Potomac Park courts yesterday. George Herbert was the fourth members who reached the round of four the day before.

Ritzenberg played an all-around game to subdue the veteran Tom Mangan, 6—2, 7—5. Stocklinski was too steady for Mather and won, 6—1, 6—0. Smith came from behind and was pressed all the way before emerging victor by the score of 3—6, 6—1, 6—4.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

SINGLES—Ray Stocklinski defeated Edward O. Mather, 6—1, 6—0; C. Alphonso Smith defeated Deane B. Judd, 3—6, 6—1, 6—4; Albert Ritzenberg defeated Tom Mangan, 6—2, 7—5.

DOUBLES—George Herbert and John Smith defeated Stanley Haney and Hy Ritzenberg, 6—4, 8—6.

Cobb Shatters Speed Record, But Unofficially

False Starts Prevent British Ace From Attaining Goal

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 22.—John Cobb, of England, covered a measured mile today in his 2,000-horsepower aluminum automobile faster than man ever had traveled on wheels before.

The British sportsman, whose announced aim was to hit a pace of 360 miles per hour, shot the sleek Railton Red Lion northbound over these table-smooth salt flats at 369.23 miles per hour. He failed, however, officially to set a new world's land speed record, motor trouble preventing the return run demanded by racing rules.

The record, standing at 357.5 miles per hour, still belongs to another Briton, Capt. George E. T. Eyston, although after his 6-miles-a-minute one way run today Cobb expressed assurance it may not for long.

"Although it appeared to be working perfectly and gained speed rapidly, I did not have it fully opened up at any time," he said.

Engine failure cut short the return run at a time when he seemed to have a new world's record within his grasp. The Briton believed several days might be necessary for checks and adjustments necessary to make possible another dash.

Phils Blank Reds, 4-0; Cardinals Lose, 8-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—The Phillies today scored their first victory in 16 starts with the Cincinnati Reds, defeating the league leaders, 4 to 0, behind brilliant five-hit pitching of Kirby Higbe.

In chalking up his fourth straight triumph and ninth of the season, Higbe, former Chicago Cub right-hander, struck out eight and issued only three passes. Only in the seventh, when the Reds filled the bases with two out, was Kirby in difficulty.

Gene Thompson started on the mound for Cincinnati and gave up all the Phillies' runs. He was relieved by Lloyd (Whitey) Moore in the sixth. The veteran Henry Johnson went to the hill in the Brooklyn, Aug. 22 (AP).—Scoring seven runs in the first four frames, the Dodgers strangled the St. Louis Cardinals' pennant hopes again today with an 8-to-5 victory.

Besides losing the second straight game in what the challenging Cardinals had intended to be a triumphant Eastern invasion, St. Louis also probably lost Infielder Jimmy Brown.

Brown was knocked unconscious in a collision with Johnny Mize, his burly teammate, in the seventh inning and was taken to a hospital for a diagnosis of his injuries. Mize finished the game, but also went to the hospital for an examination tonight.

The Dodgers were outhit, but

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Toledo, Aug. 22.—In a Toledo hotel room today we met the kid shortstop for whom Clark Griffith paid $40,000 sight unseen. Mr. Griffith you've bought a likely lad. Jimmy Pofahl is a bundle of baseball ambition.

POVICH

He's just a boy, with an unruly cowlick, a gee-whiz smile, a bright-eyed countenance and a consuming passion for baseball. They named him aptly when they called him Jimmy. He's all that the name typically implies, with a touch of the mischief in him. He's still a bit bewildered by that $40,000 price tag the Minneapolis club placed on him, but he's nuts about being in the big leagues at last.

At last it means, for Jimmy, that he's getting his chance at 22 years of age. But he's been aiming at it for a dozen years, he says, ever since the kids made him captain of the Rinky-Dink A. C. at Fairbault, Minn., 60 miles south of Minneapolis. Thence followed four years of high school baseball, a shortstop job with Winnipeg in the Northern League, a year at Springfield in the Ohio League, two years in the American Association and now—the big leagues are beckoning.

Jimmy sort of thinks he'll do all right with the Washington club, but he's no popoff. You'd have to rate him a bit on the shy side. But where Jimmy is concerned there is nothing shy about his roommate, Buck Fausett, who plays along side of Pofahl at third base for the Minneapolis club. Fausett was marvelously frank.

"The Washington club bought one heluva ball player when they bought Jimmy," said Fausett.

Sure Shot to Make Good in Majors

"You shouldn't say that, Buck," said Jimmy. "Why not? It's the truth," Fausett said, and then turning to this department, added: "Jimmy's too modest. He'd have you think he's just an ordinary ball player when everybody in this league knows he's a sure shot to make good in the majors. He's a standout in the association. All he needs is a chance at the big leagues."

There was more than a tinge of wistfulness in that last remark by Buck Fausett. Pofahl's roommate has been around in baseball—minor league baseball—for a long time. He was down in the Texas League in 1932 when Hank Greenberg and School Boy Rowe went up to the Tigers. He's seen a half hundred of his minor league teammates get their chance in the big leagues. But nobody ever invited Buck Fausett to try out for the majors. He was good enough to play in the Texas League, and he's been a steady performer in the American Association for five years, but the big leagues, well, somehow . . .

There was wistfulness, perhaps, as Fausett tossed bouquets at his young roommate, but no rancor whatsoever. "Anything you want to know about Jimmy, ask me," Buck was saying, "he's been my roommate all season and never letting on that he's a great player."

Corrected Bad Form on Slides After Injury

Young Pofahl aimed a pillow at his roomie and said, "Pay no attention to that guy. He thinks I'm wonderful. Tell me about this fellow George Case. Is he as fast as all that?"

Assured that Case was the fastest thing in the American League, Pofahl was intensely interested when we explained that Case's only bad feature was his poor sliding form which resulted in frequent injuries.

"See this," said Jimmy, holding up his right wrist. "I got that sliding and it's been bothering me for two months. I had that bad habit of going down on my hand when I slid. But I finally got that licked."

"Tell the man how you licked that bad sliding form," Fausett insisted.

"Well," said Jimmy, "I run the bases now with my fists closed. It's just as easy, and I find I don't hurt my hands any more. I'm kind of proud the way I figured that out for myself. You might tell Case about it sometime."

Stars Advance At Newport; Hunt Victor

Last of Foreign Netmen Eliminated; Grant Wins Easily

By the Associated Press

Newport, R. I., Aug. 22.—After brushing aside the last of the seven foreign contenders, the field of the Newport Casino tennis tournament was reduced to the round of 16 today in the most formful fashion possible.

All 11 of the seeded survivors were quartered in the fourth round, when the day's singles program was completed, and such capable, although unfavored, competitors as Bill Gillespie and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, Morey Lewis, of Texarkana, Ark., the Canadian champion, and Californians Larry Dee and Dave Freeman captured the remaining brackets.

Bobbitt and Dee insured an all-American windup by, respectively, eliminating France's Jacques Brugnon, 6—4, 6—4, and Bernard Destremeau, 3—6, 6—4, 7—5, in the third round.

Bitsy Grant Victor

Second-seeded Bitsy Grants decisively defeated Bill Talbert, the highly promising Cincinnati youngster, 6—0, 6—2.

Top-seeded Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, dropped only one game to Norman Dalrymple, of Winchester, Mass., and third-seeded Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., pounded out 6—3, 6—2, wins over Ronald Lubin, his home-townsman, and Norman Bickel, of Chicago.

While so far but one domestic seeding, Johnny Doeg, the Rumson, N. J., veteran, has been forced to yield, it appeared likely that the list might suffer a second dent through a default. Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., who was ranked fourth, injured his hand while eliminating Frank Shields, of New York, 6—2, 7—5, and was unable to join Cooke for the afternoon's double play.

Sabin was paired against Hal Surface, of Kansas City, in tomorrow's fourth-round play.

The other seeded players to advance were Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla.; Frank Guernsey, the national intercollegiate champion; Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex.; Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle.

Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, won from John Shustrom, of Chicago, 6—4, 6—3.

Half of the four foreign teams passed out of the doubles play in rapid order. The Cuban Davis Cup team of Guido Connil and Ricardo Morales defaulted and Felicismo Ampon and Amada Sanchez, of the Philippines, were tamed in easy fashion by Bobbitt and Guernsey, 6—1, 6—2, in the first round.

Brugnon and Destremeau drew a bye before gaining the third round over Armand Bruneau, of New York, and Ronald Lubin, of Portland, Oreg., 7—5, 6—3. The Anglo-American team of Charles Hare and Californian Jack Tidball defeated W. J. Clothier, jr., of Philadelphia, and Gil Hunt, of Washington, 6—3, 6—0, and Alastan and Willis Martin, the New York brother entry, 6—0, 6—4.

14,000 See Night Game In Cleveland

Lewis' 3-Run Homer Futile as Chase Blows Up; Feller Is Off Form

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—The Nats maintained their .000 average in big league night life this evening. Under the lights of vast Municipal Stadium they tossed off one more, tasting a 6-4 defeat by the Cleveland Indians before a mark-down crowd of 14,981 exulting local citizens.

They had Cleveland's Bob Feller on the ropes midway in the ball game with Ken Chase pitching two-hit ball, and then the Indians hit a jack-pot inning, a luscious six in which six little Indians clattered across the plate and brought home the victory.

For Feller, it was his eighteenth victory of the year and something of a sweet personal triumph because tonight he set a record for himself by walking only one batter, his best evidence of control since breaking into the big leagues four years ago. Until tonight, two bases on balls in a single game was Feller's proudest boast.

Collapse Is Sudden

Without warning, Chase's effectiveness collapsed in the sixth inning after he had been pitching shutout ball and seemingly threatening to repeat a two-hit shutout victory he scored against the Indians in his last meeting with Vitt's club. Before Manager Bucky Harris could get him out of the box, the Indians had cracked three runs across the plate and tied the count.

The Indians would probably prefer that no questions be asked about their last three runs in the sixth inning, however, because they were distinctly luck-annointed tallies against Pete Appleton who relieved the faltering Chase.

The sixth inning uprising nullified a heroic piece of business by Buddy Lewis who, with one swing of his bludgeon set the Nats up in a 3-0 lead in the third inning. With Giuliani and Chase on base and two out, Lewis boomed a line drive home run far, far into the right field seats.

Came the Sixth Inning

But the sixth inning was the story of the ball game, and here are the harrowing details:

Chase, who had walked only one batter in five innings, suddenly lost his control in the sixth and passed the first two batters, Lou Boudreau and Bruce Campbell. He required only nine pitches to do the job. He was rescued from immediate trouble when George Case raced over to the right field foul line to drag down Ben Chapman's drooping fly with a fancy catch, but then along came Hal Trosky, Chase's own nemesis.

Trosky banged a two-bagger past Vernon down the right field foul line and then the Indians had two runs. Jeff Heath slapped a single to center and the score was tied at three-three. And when the next batter, Ken Keltner, sliced a single to left, there were men on first and third with only one out.

Bad Break for Appleton

At this point, Pete Appleton put in his appearance and met with some immediate success. He struck out Ray Mack for the second out. And then Appleton got a brutal break. An innocuous - looking grounder off the bat of Rollie Hemsley took a fiendish hop far to the right of Jimmy Bloodworth and evolved as a freak single that scored Keltner with the fourth run. Disaster followed quickly after that. Bob Feller singled to center and Boudreau singled to right, to drive home the fifth and sixth runs.

Alex Alexandra tossed two shutout innings at the Indians after that but the Nats could stir up only one more run against Feller who, pun my word, was making very light of 'em under the arcs.

Feller asked for trouble back in the third inning when he walked Jimmy Vernon at the outset and then he was knee deep in it when Keltner collided with Leftfielder Jeff Heath causing Heath to drop Giuliani's high fly which evolved as a single. Ken Chase made a horrible sacrifice buting attempt that

Marion Brown Upsets Mrs. Glenna Vare in First Round

Young Manor Golfer Wins Match, 2 Up

Most of Other Favored Entries Advance in Women's National Championship

By the Associated Press

Darien, Conn., Aug. 22.—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, to whom golf has been little more than a game these past four years, found out today that sort of attitude doesn't get you far in a national championship.

It got Glenna no farther than a first-round match. She was beaten, 2 up, by young Marion Brown, Middle Atlantic champion from Manor Country Club, Washington, D. C.

Despite the fact she hadn't decided to play until late last week, Glenna had been made one of the favorites for this forty-third United States title tourney at the Wee Burn Club. But after the first nine holes against Miss Brown, at which point Mrs. Vare was 3 up with a 3-over-par 40, Glenna lost the touch that had carried her to six titles and just couldn't regain it.

The Philadelphia woman for years has been one o fthe most popular players in women's golf. To the sidelines with her this afternoon went 15-year-old Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., who some day may command a similar sway over her public. Against Maureen Orcutt, former metropolitan champion from Haworth, N J., Jeanne couldn't quite stand the pace and lost out at 3 and 1.

In the other 30 first-round matches, it was form that prevailed in the majority of instances.

Miss Jameson Wins

Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., won a lot of new supporters with the ease of her 6 and 5 conquest of Helen Waterhouse, of Providence, and such noted campaigners as Marion Miley, Dot Kirby, Mrs. Dan Chandler, Dorothy Traung and Sheila Stroyan, the English girls' champion, were right in there pitching.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, the only other District entrant to get by the qualifying round, was eliminated in her first-round match by Harriett Randall, of Indianapolis. Miss Randall beat Mrs. Hill, 1 up at the nineteenth hole.

For the "medium old-timers" in the gallery, the finest victory of the day was the eighteenth hole triumph of Mary K. Browne, of Cleveland, over Young Gail Wild, of Springfield, N. J. Miss Mary was tennis champion just before the war, but there wasn't anything antiquated about the way in which she outsteadied her youthful opponent.

Johnson-Powell Win City-wide Track Meet

Two thousand athletically inclined youngsters from 100 District playgrounds took over Central High School stadium yesterday for a spell of running and jumping in the District Recreation Department's sixteenth annual track and field meet, which turned out to be a push-over for Johnson-Powell.

Coming in the back way, the Johnson-Powell lads seized a batch of second and third places and won only three first places to take the city-wide meet for the second successive year with 45½ points. Langdon was second with 38, and Rosedale third with 27.

The equipment was as varied as the facial expressions of the athletes, whose ages ranged from 10 to 18, two records were smashed during the four-hour meet, and one was tied.

Barefooted boys were on every hand, cinder track notwithstanding. Billy Graves, 17-year-old Rosedale entrant, shed his shoes and won the 115-pound running broad jump with a leap of 17 feet 9 inches.

Gets Jump Monopoly

With his leap, Billy established an undisputd monopoly on the jump event. Four years ago he won it in the 70-pound class, he won it the next year in the 85-pound class, again last year in the 100-pound class.

In the 135-pound class, Frank Ciango, of Roosevelt, set a new record in the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet ⅛ inch, surpassing the 1938 record of 19½ feet. In the same class, Norman Davis, 16-year-old Burroughs contestant, set a new high-jump record of 5 feet 8 inches, shattering a 1937 jump of 5 feet 7 inches. Leonard Leveis, of Shepherd, in the unlimited class, tied the 1933 high-jump record with a jump of 5 feet 10 inches.

A "surprise" event was staged by two quartets of college and former college star track athletes as the day's crowning event. The collegians, among the spectators in the stands, suddenly discovered one another's presence and staged an impromptu 880-yard relay.

The Blues, composed of Frank Cronin, former Maryland University athlete; Tommy Fields, of Maryland University; Stuart Reeves, of Georgetown, and Harry March, of the University of North Carolina, won the event in 1 minute 33.3 seconds.

Their opponents, the Skins, included Joe St. Lawrence, Cortland Teachers; Jim Kehoe, Maryland; Hermie Evans, Maryland, and George Bogan, Georgetown.

Melton Holds Cubs, Giants Prevail, 4-2

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 22.—Lefty Cliff Melton notched his third straight victory and his ninth of the season today with an 8-hit, 4-to-2 job against the Chicago Cubs.

He held the Bruins scoreless until the eighth inning when three singles and a sacrifice fly scored both their runs.

The Giants chased old Charley Root with three runs in the first inning to decide the ball game for practical purposes. Joe Moore and Frank Demaree each hit homers and Harry Danning's double and Bill Jurges' single added another run.

New York also scored in the fourth on two singles and an error.

Pirates Shell Fette, Defeat Bees, 8 to 2

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 22.—Showing some of their early 1938 style, Pittsburgh's Pirates hopped on the offerings of the Bees' Lou Fette in the first inning for four runs today and went on to win, 8 to 2.

Nothing like a club that on Sunday lost its twelfth straight game for this season's National League record, the Buccaneers banged three Boston pitchers for 14 hits, including a three-run double by Elbie Fletcher, former Bee first baseman.

Dodgers Defeat Cardinals, 8-5

made up this deficiency by bunching their blows and scoring once in the eighth without a safety.

Manager Ray Blades used 18 players, including four pitchers, but most of the damage was done against Workhorse Curt Davis, who started. In the first inning Harry Lavagetto homered and the Dodgers loaded the bases on three singles to get another tally with a sacrifice fly.

Then in the third Lavagetto walked and Camilli hit his twenty-first round-tripper of the season.

Davis was replaced by Bob Bowman in the fourth after Gene Moore doubled and Manager Leo Durocher singled, Moore going to third and Durocher reaching second safely when Brown dropped a throw. Pete Coscarart singled the runners home and scored himself on a sacrifice fly after going to third on Lavagetto's second single.

Twin Features Due Tomorrow On Arena Mat

The local wrestling "old guard" has been dispersed for the nonce by Promoter Joe Turner, and fans will see a new batch of cauliflowered ears and bent noses at the W street arena tomorrow night when Nanjo Singh meets Red Ryan in a match co-featured with a struggle between Jack Hader and Rudy Strongberg.

Although it has been about 20 years since you could describe the incoming crop as "fresh faces," most of the fellows' countenances will be more or less unfamiliar in these parts.

The line-up brings out Ralph Garibaldi versus Eddie Cook.

"Never a dull moment at my place," Turner said proudly yesterday, coining a phrase spontaneously. "Each of these boys has heard of the undying fame Singh has won in his nine straight headline appearances and all of them would like to end his reign."

In short, Turner indicated he has discovered in Singh a "better mousetrap" and wrestledom is beating a path to his door. Only disheartening news of the day was that Newcomer Newman is "regarded as another Bibber McCoy," and everybody knows Bibber's groan routine.

Tavernmen Win First

The Little Tavern nine won the first of the three-game championship series of the Washington Boys Club yesterday on the Eastern High School diamond, beating Northeast Boys Club, 10 to 0. Lester Wickleim held the losers to six hits. The midget teams meet today at 1 p. m., on the West Ellipse.

Tex's Tavern Victors

O'Brien Makes Debut As Pro, Eagles Win

Philadelphia, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles, with Texas Christian's Davey O'Brien making his debut in professional football, put across two touchdowns in the final quarter tonight to defeat the Eastern All-Stars, 17-0.

Hank Reese, of Scranton, former Temple star, started the Eagles on the 1939 scoring road with a second period field goal. In a boiling last period, Davey O'Brien, former Texas Christian aerial ace, and Joe Bukant, one-time Washington University star, went over the All-Star goal line for touchdowns with Dave Smukler and Reese adding the extra points.

O'Brien, starting to earn his 25 grand a year as a professional football star, failed to display the accuracy that brought him All-American recognition. He tossed 10 passes. Three were intercepted and seven were grounded.

"Little Davey," however, proved to be an elusive ball carrier despite the fact he only scales 150 pounds, tearing off numerous large gains. He, Smuckler and Dick Riffle, former Albright triple-threat, were the big guns in the Bird offense.

The All-Stars failed to function with the smooth perfection of the professionals. They did turn back several Eagle scoring threats and four times menaced the enemy goal line.

Homer Ruins Galehouse's 3-Hit Shutout

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—Denny Galehouse had a three-hit shutout chalked up for the Boston Red Sox today until George McQuinn's ninth-inning homer set off a 3-run rally for the St. Louis Browns to bring the final count to 10 to 3.

Two singles and a pinch double accounted for the other Brownie runs.

Marlboro, With 'Tote' as Attraction, Opens Meeting Today

Three Races Over Routes On Program

Electric Wagering Device Ready for Fans; Racing Will Start at 2 P. M.

By Walter Haight

After shooting at long range for sometime, the racing howitzers have been rolled right up to Washington's border line and are ready to lay down a 10-day barrage of bangtailing opening this afternoon. While hardly revealing "improvements costing $75,000," as reported by the track's press agent, Marlboro is brushed up and the meeting promises to prove an important stop on the Maryland half-mile circuit.

Of chief interest to John F. Turfan, who usually has been forced to take his wagering as he has found it at Marlboro, is the installation of the totalizator. This electric betting machine, which automatically registers every bet and keeps accurate odds, was given a trial yesterday and clicked along in big league fashion. Mutuel Manager Donald Hay gave his crew instructions and they will be ready to handle the betting with the same dispatch that it is handled at Santa Anita or Narragansett Park.

The board in the infield, which will be the center of all eyes, is a trim affair with the usual lights to flash the numbers. On each end are wings, one for the jockeys and the other for the daily double. And if you don't believe Marlboro has gone a bit up stage, instead of the usual "foul" sign, there is one which spells "objection."

The "tote" is the standard make, on a small scale, and operates along the same lines as those at the larger tracks.

Next to the new betting machine, that does away with the unsatisfactory blackboard which brought very approximate odds to the customers in other years, the new starting time of 2 p. m. is of importance to the fans. Heretofore, Marlboro has had a 2:30 p. m. post time for the first race which has made for late evening meals. Officials have promised to keep the program going and the crowd should get home earlier than in previous years.

To those fans who have been following the horse trail through Charles Town, Hagerstown, Bel Air and Cumberland, there is little new in the entries for today, although Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has a fairly well balanced card featured by three distance races on the tail end of the program. The Upper Marlboro Purse, a test of a mile and a sixteenth, is one of the two chief attractions. The race has drawn 11 overnight entries, but due to the eight-horse limit there will be scratches. In this event Locomotive, Puddles, Gracky and other winners will clash.

Joel Hunt Joins Davis Cup Squad At Merion Club

Haverford, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP).—Joel Hunt, Annapolis midshipman who was the fourth man on last year's Davis Cup team, joined the United States squad, practicing at the Merion Cricket Club for his first workout today.

Hunt's arrival increased the squad under Coach Bruce Barnes to four. Jack Kramer and Welby Van Horn, both of California, and Frank Parker were earlier arrivals.

Gene Mako was expected to join the squad late today or tomorrow while Bobby Riggs will arrive tomorrow. Other possibilities for the squad—Bitsy Grant, Don McNeill, Elwood Cooke and Sidney Wood—are playing at Newport.

Capt. Walter L. Pate also may arrive tomorrow. He said he would announce Sunday the four men who will defend the tennis trophy at Merion September 2, 3 and 4.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SECOND HEAVEN, $34.90, $11.40, $4.30; DREEL, $3.80, $2.40; DOROTHY OWSLEY, $2.50.

SECOND HEAVEN, hard hustled to enter into contention during the first quarter mile, worked her way to the leaders readily and taking command in the stretch, drew away steadily. DREEL had speed from outset and fought it out with good energy to close. DOROTHY OWSLEY, well placed and stoutly reserved early, was unable to close any amount of ground when placed under punishment and barely lasted to hold SHANTIME safe. The latter, well placed, held on willingly to the close. ZACABOX was unable to reach the leaders. WHOOPER, away fast, was unable to close any ground.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:49. Off 2:53½. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's b. c. (2), by Prince of Wales—Bara Helen. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:00 2-5, 1:06 4-5.

BOUNTIFUL	(Ensor)	110	2	7	7½½	6h	8	8	8	26.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCARLET RAIDER, $8.20, $4.00, $2.90; CHI, $3.30, $2.50; CORCADES, $3.70.

SCARLET RAIDER moved to the leader when straightening out on the backstretch, supplanted WAR STREAK from command, drew clear and holding on stoutly under punishment through the stretch held CHI safe to the end. CHI, prominent from the start and under slight reserve for the first mile and a half furlongs, moved up when straightened for the stretch and while holding on gamely, was unable to reach the winner. CORCADES, slightly reserved, moved up on the inside.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,600; allowances. The Hartford. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:29½. Winner, Tall Trees Stable's ch. f. (3), by Milkman—Mimely. Trained by L. O'Donnell. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $285; third (dead heat), $102.50; fourth (dead heat), $102.50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:11.

†Dead heat.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY MORN, $3.70, $2.50, $2.20; DAN CUPID, $3.90, $2.20; TORCHLIGHT (dead heat), $2.30; PRECEPTOR II (dead heat), $2.80.

EARLY MORN went to the front at once, drew clear in the run through the backstretch, was rated willingly under slight restraint and increased her advantage steadily through the stretch. DAN CUPID followed along in pursuit of the early pace, dropped back, but came willingly in the stretch. TORCHLIGHT was hard hustled to follow along in closest chase of the pace for the first half mile, weakened through the stretch and just lasted. PRECEPTOR II unable to keep up.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:07. Winner, Mrs. F. B. Ponce's ch. g. (6), by Chance Play—Lou Nelly. Trained by C. Ponce. Value to winner, $840; second, $210; third, $90; fourth, $60. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:11 3-5.

DIXIELAND	(Kroviis)	103	7	3	6½½	5h	5nk	8	8.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCER, $6.50, $3.60, $2.70; CHIEF NADI, $6.10, $3.80; HASTY STAR, $3.80.

CHANCER was under slight reserve while steadied along back of the pace, wore down HASTY STAR for the lead when reaching the stretch and was slowly increasing this advantage at the close. CHIEF NADI went well placed throughout, saved his finishing ground and closed with good courage. HASTY STAR went to the front at once, opened up good lead and while weakening in last furlong, lasted to withstand the bid of MY ELSIE.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:36½. Winner, H. E. Simpson's blk. g. (4), by Toyster—Catherine Fox. Trained by W. Zakor. Value to winner, $840; second, $210; third, $90; fourth, $60. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

BABY SWEEP	(Dotter)	113	4	2	2nk	2h	8	8	8	5.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOXSTER, $10.90, $5.00, $3.50; HELEN'S LAD, $3.80, $2.90; CANDY HERO, $4.40.

FOXSTER was steadied along back of the pace, moved up stoutly when leaving the backstretch, went into a good lead and was never threatened, although ridden out smartly to the close. HELEN'S LAD moved up gradually on the inside down the backstretch, was held on determinedly under punishment through the stretch. CANDY HERO, after a slow start, moved on the outside around the first turn, continued to race wide and closed with good energy.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:06. Off 6:09. Winner, W. Wick's b. g. (3), by Cherokee—Realize. Trained by R. McKeever. Value to winner, $840; second, $210; third, $90; fourth, $60. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

SAM ALEXANDER	(Scheib)	113	4	7	7	7	7	7	7	5.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHEROLIZE, $58.30, $28.00, $7.60; PLUSHING, $6.20, $3.60; HIGH TENSION, $2.70.

CHEROLIZE outran his field from the start, opened up a good lead and rated along in front, responded gamely to punishment through the stretch to hold away to the close. PLUSHING, under punishment early in an effort to hold a forward position, came strongly in the stretch run. HIGH TENSION moved up on the inside down the backstretch, was forced to take up when MAHLETTE came over after leaving the backstretch, was taken back and sent to the outside. He closed willingly and was along in the last strides to wear down BROADWAY JUEL.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al:

Good time vacation, better time Marlboro. Well folks I'm glad to get back to work so I can rest. I'm not exactly fit as a fiddle or fresh as a daisy, but I guess I can drag the body around the circuit for another year. Before swinging into the horses for another season, I'd like to pass along one of my vacation tidbits. With Mrs. Bennings and our little Benningites, I headed from Hagerstown to the family retreat on the bay. I had decided

Home Loans Up $42,178,000 In Fiscal Year

Assets of 3,897 Members of System Rise $236,000,000

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A gain of $42,178,000 in loans for new home construction by member savings, building and loan associations of the Federal Home Loan Bank System during the fiscal year ended June 30, is reported by officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

This advance from $177,548,000 to $219,726,000 during the 12-month period, as estimated by the board's division of research and statistics, reflects a parallel rise in residential construction and in the volume of savings available for home-financing purposes.

Assets of the 3,897 member savings and loan associations of the bank system were $236,000,000 greater on June 30 than a year earlier, totaling about $3,936,000,000, the fiscal year-end report continues.

On June 30, the banks had a total of $128,907,960 in cash and investments, an expansion of $58,137,468 over the $68,770,492 on June 30, 1938.

Berlin-Moscow Flirtation Stuns London Market

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—The news of an imminent German-Soviet nonaggression pact today caused the worst slump in the London markets since the "war scare" crisis last September.

British government securities led an all-around marking down of quotations ranging from 1 to 3 points immediately after the stock exchange opening.

The 3½ per cent war loan—rated the "weather vane" of the gilt-edged securities list and comparable with the United States liberty loan—touched a record low at the start of business at 87, an overnight drop of 2⅛. German and Austrian bonds and Japanese loans eased off.

The absence of any marked selling pressure, however, caused a slight betterment of quotations after dealers had time to recover from the first shock of the Russo-German "handshake." The British war loan recovered a point at 88 and there was fractional improvement in other issues.

Two leading "war staples"—copper and rubber—held firm in face of the generally lower markets. They have been supported recently by heavy German purchases. Rubber was off a shade around the equivalent of 17 cents a pound but copper was higher.

Railroad Earnings Show Large Gains

Cleveland, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. reported today net income of $2,929,221 for the month of July, compared with $1,833,857 for the same month last year. For the first seven months of 1939, the company reported net income of $8,328,631, compared with $7,357,426 for the corresponding perid of 1938.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22 (AP).—Net incomt of the Norfolk & Western Railway for July was $2,690,333, an increase of $1,114,194 compared with July of last year. This amounted to $1.86 earned per share on common stock, as against $1.07 for July a year ago. For the seven months of the present year, net income was $11,053,955, an increase of $4,961,337 over the same period in 1938. For the seven months the earned per share on common stock was $7.48, compared with $3.95 in the same period in 1938.

Wheat Pit Ignores Crisis Over Poland

Prices Close ⅝ to 1½ Cents Lower; Other Grains Decline

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—The Chicago wheat pit took the latest European political developments calmly today. Prices slumped a cent a bushel or more under the weight of profit taking, light hedging sales and liquidation based on some traders' belief that swift moving events in Europe did not necessarily indicate large scale war is nearer. There were expressions on the floor that signing of a nonaggression pact between Germany and Russia may postpone a war among big powers. Strength in securities supported this view of the situation, traders said.

Falling off in foreign demand for actual wheat after yesterday's large scale purchasing also tended to hold buying in check. Export circles reported approximately 400,000 bushels were sold from the Gulf overnight and today under the subsidy, which was estimated at 36 cents a bushel for No. 1 hard and dark hard varieties, but no confirmation of this was received.

Closings Near Low

Wheat closed near the day's lows, ⅝-1½ cents lower than yesterday; September, 66¾@66¾; December, 67@67⅛. Other grains followed, corn closing ¼-1 cent off; September, 43½; December, 43@43⅛; oats, ¼@⅞ down; rye, ⅜@1⅜ down, and lard, 10-15 lower.

Increased hedging pressure that helped to weaken wheat prices was associated with heavy receipts of new spring grain at Northwest terminals. Minneapolis and Duluth received 1,435 cars, compared with 733 a week ago and 903 a year ago.

The downturn here largely ignored the sharpest upturn at Liverpool in weeks. Prices there were as much as 2¾ cents higher at one time, but later about half of this gain was lost, Liverpool closing 1-1⅜ cents net higher. Cables said offerings of Canadian and Argentine grain were taken and that Argentine prices had been raised ½ cent a bushel. There was much hedging by Argentine shippers, however.

Cotton Futures 30 to 55 Cents A Bale Higher

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Cotton futures rallied today with securities markets closing 6 to 11 points higher. Selling pressure was not heavy at any time during the session and when the brisk rally in stocks attracted considerable Wall Street buying, advances held up well. Cotton traders appeared to feel the Russo-German pact plan lessened the danger of war for the present at least.

Hedging sales—which analysts say can be expected to increase soon as new cotton moves to market—remained light despite general favorable harvesting conditions in the Southwest. Consequently there was not much cotton for sale.

Stocks Rally Despite Rumblings of War Wall Street Takes Optimistic View But Polish Bonds Drop Decisively

New York, Aug. 22.—Wall street figuratively threw its hands in the air today in trying to put a dollar appraisal on the kaleidoscope of swiftly shifting foreign affairs. It we must judge by the figures on the various tapes when closing gongs were rung, the conclusion is that the financial community was somewhat calmer than was the case Monday, despite announcement of the Russian-German nonaggression pact and the calling to the colors of the French and German reservists.

A summary of the reaction in Wall street, although generally favorable, continued to reflect the tension that is world-wide. It includes the following highspots:

The stock market recovered part of Monday's loss. Judged by the composite average, the comeback was 0.52 point, with active leaders adding 1 to 2 points. Trading was only normal, amounting to 861,840 shares.

United States Government bonds, traded in on the New York Stock Exchange, recorded additional losses to those sustained on Monday. But the greatest trading in this type of bond is on the over-the-counter market, which closes at 4:30 instead of at 3, as does the Stock Exchange. And between 4:30 Monday and the same time today, the Government list came back to show minor improvement.

Britain Supports the Pound

In the foreign exchange market there was continued pressure against foreign currencies, notably the pound. Supported by the British government's exchange equalization account, its quotation was unchanged in the New York market but this could not hide the heavy selling. Greatest weakness in this market was sustained by the Belgian belga, off 4 points, apparently on the assumption that if Britain and France cannot protect Poland, they likewise can do little for Belgium.

Foreign security markets were weak before the New York market opened. This was particularly true of London and Amsterdam, the former coming back before its close and dragging Amsterdam slightly higher. New York had the benefit of knowledge of this late recovery when trading started here at 10 o'clock, and our opening was higher. The early hours also were the most active, about half of the volume on the big board coming in the first two hours.

Utility Issue Postponed

Directly reflecting the uncertainty of conditions in the financial market was the postponement of a major piece of new financing which was scheduled for tomorrow. A $45,000,000 issue of bonds of the Northern Indiana Public Service Co. was put over until further notice.

Two principal reasons for the better trend noted by the majority of the above factors were the technical position of the market after the declines of the previous few days and a belief in the financial district that despite the diplomatic victory won by the axis powers, war may yet be avoided.

The stock market had been well sold out. Trading is admittedly largely professional at the moment and a comparatively small volume of buying orders from this class of trader, acting on the assumption that a technical rebound was in order and that London's late rally gave the cue, were sufficient to bring respectable gains. There were no large liquidating orders hanging over the market, so a few purchase orders did the trick.

Basis of Peace Hopes

On the diplomatic front, while not minimizing the acute seriousness of the situation, there was a belief in some quarters that Germany's success with Russia may postpone for an indefinite period the outbreak of hostilities. This thought was based on the assumption that the Nazis will secure Danzig and the Corridor without a military struggle. With Russia in a nonaggression pact with Germany, it was felt that Great Britain and France will not be able to supply effective support to Poland in the event of German aggression and that as a consequence the Nazis are in a position to win another bloodless victory. As dire as may be the eventual consequences to the democratic powers, the view held by many in the street is that it precludes a war in the immediate future.

Hitler the Pivot

This is a rough summary of what the street was thinking and guessing, for from the top banker to the youngest runner everyone knew that the one man with the answers resides some 3,000 miles from Broad and Wall. The tension that exists was noted in every conversation. One wag of the financial district pointed out that when important Englishmen cut short their week-ends in the month of August, there can be no question of the seriousness of the situation. Our own Ambassador and Wall street's former ringmaster, Joe Kennedy, also cut short his vacation in France, flying back to London.

Traders are paying virtually no attention to the customary indices of domestic business, for the figures on steel output, car loadings and kilowatt-hour output and the like, which used to shape values, are valueless at the moment, even though they are showing improvement. For the record, it is expected that the weekly report of the utility industry on power output, to be made today, will show a new high record for all time. Steel operations are at their high of the year.

All Groups Firm

All groups of stocks came back in today's rally. Aviations, which were a weak feature Monday on the assumption that the neutrality act would interfere with American companies filling their foreign orders, rebounded with the rest. While airplanes are among the verboten articles under this act, it is assumed the act would be altered quickly by a special session of Congress which will be called in the event of hostilities.

Chrysler added about 2 points and Motors 1⅝. Bethlehem was up 1⅝ and United States Steel a point. A most active stock was Loft, up nearly a point. Telephone added a point, C. & O. 2, Manville 1¼, Kennecott 1⅛, Union Carbide 2¾, Westinghouse 3¾ and United States Rubber 1⅜. Du Pont was a feature of strength but not of activity, adding 4⅞ points.

Foreign Bonds Feature Trading

Although trading continued at a slow pace, diverse price movements in the foreign list featured today's bond market. Reflecting the overnight turn in political developments, Polish obligations were outstanding weak spots. One sale of Poland 7s of 1947 was made at 73, off 9 points, while the 8s of 1950 were down 3¼ at 42 and the 4½s of 1963 fell 1¾ to a new low for the year at 34¾. Active German and Italian issues were strong, with gains ranging to more than 3 points.

Minus signs predominated for U. S. Government issues at the close of dealings on the New York Stock Exchange, but firmness developed in late trading and closing over-the-counter quotes showed a majority of pluses over the day before. Treasury 3¼s of 1943-45 slipped to a new low for the year at 106 18-32 on the exchange, but recovered to 109 21-32 at the close, where it was down 2-32. Larger losses were shown for some of the inactive Treasuries, but the losses were pared in the late over-the-counter trade where net gains ranging to 4-32 were shown among the longer-term maturities.

Rail Issues in Demand

The corporate list was an irregular affair, with gains among various second grade rails leading the side of advance. Net advances running from 1 to 2 points were noted among some liens of Baltimore & Ohio, Illinois Central, New York Central, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway. Other gainers of a point or more included some issues of Manati Sugar, Portland General Electric, Studebaker, United Drug, Warren Brothers, Wheeling Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Down a point or more were Boston & Maine 5s of 1955, Cleveland Electric Illuminating 3¾ of 1965, General Steel Casting 5½s of 1949, International Telephone & Telegraph debenture 5s of 1955 and 4½ of 1952, Liggett & Myers 7s of 1944, Ohio Edison first 4s of 1967, R-K-O 6s of 1941 and United Cigar-Whelan 5s of 1952. Bond sales on the New York Stock Exchange totaled $4,930,000 par value, against $4,786,000 the day before.

Strikes Are Barred On $15,000,000 Job

By the Associated Press

John P. Coyne, president of the American Federation of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, said today that the Commonwealth Edison Co., of Chicago, had agreed to begin $15,000,000 of plant expansion work upon his assurance that no union jurisdictional strikes would interrupt the work. Coyne's disclosure of the agreement with Commonwealth Edison was one of the first major developments in the building industry growing out of the agreement reached at Atlantic City recently between A. F. L. building trades and the Associated General Contractors.

Timken Roller Profits Climb In Half Year

$1.42 a Share Compares With 6 Cents in Same 1938 Period

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 22.—The Timken Roller Bearing Co. reported today for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $3,422,370, equal to $1.42 a share on the capital stock, compared with $164,201, or 6 cents a share, in the like period last year. The indicated profit for the second quarter was $1,514,977, equal to 63 cents a share, against a net loss of $109,064 in the second quarter last year. The company's main plant is at Canton, Ohio.

Servel, Inc.

Servel Incorporated, makers of refrigerators, reported net profit for the quarter ended July 31 of $1,241,417, equal to 69 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $836,226, or 46 cents a share, in the preceding quarter and $595,252, or 33 cents a share, in the comparable 1938 quarter. Plant is at Evansville, Ind.

Pan American Petroleum

Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. and subsidiaries today reported net profit for the second quarter of the year of $749,992, equal after charges to 16 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $750,282, also 16 cents a share, in the preceding quarter and net loss of $529,840 in the June quarter last year. Company is controlled by Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Jewel Tea

Jewel Tea Co., Inc., reported today net earnings for the 28 weeks ended July 15 totaled $719,835, or $2.57 a share, compared with $693,522, or $2.48 a share in the like 1938 period. For the 52 weeks ended July 15 net earnings were $1,450,272, or $5.18 a share, compared with $1,378,568, or $4.92 a share in the corresponding period a year ago.

Sixty Per Cent Of Celanese Stock Owned in the U. S.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Celanese Corporation of America asserted today that more than 60 per cent of its stock is owned in the United States.

The statement was made in answer to a letter sent last week by the Cumberland, Md., local of the United Textile Workers Union to Lord Lothian, newly appointed British Ambassador, charging that the company is "owned and controlled in large part by British residents who receive the produce of American workers' toil."

The company's statement showed that 88 per cent of its common-stock holders, owning 68 per cent of that class of stock, live in the United States; that 86 per cent of prior preferred-stock holders, owning 65 per cent of that stock, are in the United States, and that 76 per cent of the participation preferred-stock holders, owning 63 per cent of that stock, are in the United States.

The company's Cumberland plant has been closed because of labor difficulties.

Bright Tobacco Prices Disappoint Sellers

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 22 (AP).—First reports of opening sales on the new bright belt tobacco market today said prices averaged from $14.62 to around $16 per hundredweight, compared with an expected average of $18. Some farmer "disappointment" was mentioned. Offerings were described as of poorer grades.

At Wilson, the biggest market, "some grumbling" was reported, and a number of tags were turned, indicating rejection of the bids made. Kinston, however, said farmers "generally appeared satisfied," as there was little good tobacco offered, and a strengthening trend in prices was noted.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—The stock market experienced the widest break since the September "war scare" last year today. In late dealings, however, quotations steadied and bottom marks were trimmed considerably. The 3½ per cent war loan, leader of the gilt-edged division, plunged to a record low with a fall of 2⅛ points, but later recovered to a net loss of 1⅛. Many industrial shares were also supported at the lower levels. German, Austrian and Japanese loans dropped. Brokers noted the wide mark-downs were posted despite large selling. Transatlantics held comparatively steady, most losses confined to fractions. There were even a few gainers.

Paris, Aug. 22 (AP).—Bourse quotations broke today when selling orders hit the market and found negligible demand. Rentes closed 95 to 120 centimes lower. Declines among certain internationals ran from 4 to as much as 10 per cent. Citroen lost 12 francs and Suez Canal more than 200. Kaffirs showed a little resistance.

Liverpool, Aug. 22 (AP).—Wheat futures shot up more than 2 cents early today following Berlin reports of a pending Russian-German pact. The market reacted under heavy Argentine selling and general profit taking, however, leaving closing prices 1¼ to 1⅜ cents a bushel higher. Nervous short covering took care of foreign selling and hedging in the cotton futures market. Final prices were unchanged to 3 up.

Mayfair
Ye Meeting Place
The Post Road Inn of storied fame was a favored meeting place of its community as well as a traveler's haven.
A modern meeting place, right in the heart of things is the Nationally Known Cafe of All Nations. Good food, reasonably priced, your favorite pick-up glorified by master bartenders, and atmosphere that keeps it . . . "a place where your friends meet . . . and you meet your friends."

SIP AWAY SUMMER HEAT
Have a cooling Collins or Planter's Punch mixed by a master craftsman of the new, air-conditioned Harrington Tavern. Or better still, try an icy "Freeze"—cracked ice beaten smooth; a rye, gin, scotch or rum base; and flavoring of fresh fruit juices!
Light "European" Breakfasts and Luncheons served in the Tavern until 2 P. M.
Regular dinners served in the famous Harrington Hotel dining room. Just across the hall.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

HARRINGTON TAVERN OPENS. Today there'll be a gala opening at the new Harrington Tavern. You'll find the place banked with gladioli, gay with the music of Mervin and his accordion. Mervin's an excellent vocalist, too, and will carol all your pet numbers. The Harrington Tavern is intimate and bright, conveniently located for downtown cocktailing. Cheerful red leather has been used lavishly for doors, banquettes and paneling. Chairs and tables are in harmonizing red and silver. The sound-proofed ceiling gives ideal acoustics. Pale pink fluorescent lighting flatters the ladies' looks. Gay circus murals complete the satisfying ensemble. Splendid air conditioning, too.

Troika will reopen on either September 15 or 22. A Meyer Davis orchestra has been booked and will be led by Sasha Lukas, who was such a universal favorite last season.

MERRY MARIONETTES. Even if you never liked marionettes before, be prepared to fall in love with the "Marionettes Moderne" on the Shoreham Terrace. They're the most amusing and sophisticated little creatures of their type you'll ever see, are handled with real artistry by Lee Gerlach and Jim Buscher. The numbers include "Minuet in Jazz," "Mata Hari" and "Suzy-Q and Johnny Jitterbug." The marionettes are the joint creation of Miss de Graffenried Woolley and Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr. Also in the Terrace show are the too-beautiful Stanley Twins and Ballroom Dancers Dade and Weir.

Rainbow Room's Milton Davis has discovered a fine new trick on the novachord. He plays it like a saxophone with the melody a third away from Parlay Eaton's sax, getting a double sax effect. Some of Glen Gray's musicians who listened to this stunt pronounced it a real honey.

VAUDEVILLE CLICKS in the Lotus' new "All Star Revue." The show includes Jack Starr, the smoke magico featured in Earl Carroll's "Vanities"; eccentric dancers Rio and Lee in something they accurately call "Legmania;" dancers Starr and Ravel in ballroom whirlwinds; the musican clown, Prof. Ah-Brusher Doninesky; Chester Dolphin in remarkable equilibrist stunts. It's one of the biggest shows ever presented in a Washington night club and offers a high entertainment content. P. S.—The Muriel Kretzlow Revue, one of the best of last season, will return to the Lotus next Monday.

CHESTER DOLPHIN, ace equilibrist, appearing at the Lotus

With the advent of Eddie Daniels and the Couriers, the Neptune Room has taken on a new and crackling atmosphere. The boys are ensconced on a new three-terrace bandstand smack in the middle of the room, Eddie and his organ right at the top of the heap. Neptuners are especially delighted with Eddie's impersonations. He can imitate anyone from Donald Duck to Zasu Pitts.

BLONDES SCORE smartly in Bamboo Gardens' new "Hollywood Revue." The beauty "line" is not only all blonde, but it's one of the prettiest that's come to town this year. And, just to pile up the entertainment dividend, most of the girls are clever specialty performers. Lee Tucker does a hula in a silver grass dress, Bunny West shines in a sharp tap number, the Brady sisters do a novel fencing dance. Also in the Bamboo revue are daredevil Russ Le Beau, Huey Lliang singing "Home on the Range," and Marian Dawn warbling the cute "Concert in the Park."

Food Thoughts: So big is the plate of appetizers offered with the "plantation dinner" at O'Donnell's Farms that we constantly wonder how the diners have enough room left for the fried chicken . . . The reason the roast ham at Dick's Grill has that superflavor is because the hams are soaked for heavens knows how long, then boiled slowly for three hours. The final baking is just to make them look pretty.

MAESTRO'S FAVORITES. Both Chet de Chastain, of the Metronome Room, and Dick Koons, of the Mayflower Lounge give their unqualified approval to "Good Night, My Beautiful," hit tune of George White's new "Scandals" . . . Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, approves "Oh, You Crazy Moon," the Glen Gray tune. But can it be that his choice has anything to do with the current Macias ennui whenever "Moonlight Serenade" is mentioned? . . . Steve Le Sieur, of the Roger Smith roof garden, has a partiality for "Baby Me."

"Shrimp Feast" tonight at the A. T. & S. Barbecue. Shrimp unlimited for two bits. Or five nickels. Sounds like the big bargain of 1939.

WHAT THEY'RE DOING. Oscar is back at the Hi Hat. He's set a record by being the only vacationist to deliberately skip the World's Fair. He preferred a couple more days in the Adirondacks . . . Harold Veo, maestro of Maryland Gardens, is making his own ciggies with a machine. He's using a blend of burley smooth, Egyptian and Turkish tobaccos. Results are something splendid . . . Singer Mary La Marr, of the Madrillon, is off to Virginia Beach for a week of sun-tanning . . . Mayfair's Art Barker, Jole and Walter Scott are among the most faithful attendants at the Watergate concerts on Sunday . . . Larry Hendrick has just completed his third year as organist at the Hay-Adams House . . . Wally Stoefler, who is leading his band at Glen Echo, got his start by playing sax and clarinet in high school orchestra at Springfield, Mo. . . . Bill Gibson, guitarist in the Carlton Lounge, likes to play the compositions of the late Dick McDonough, one of the few top-flight composers for the guitar. . . . Arthur Todd, Hour Glass singer, often dashes up to Warrenton and New York to play for social register parties.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Take today's hand, played by Sherman Stearns and M. D. Maier against W. Howard ("Buffalo Bill") Woolworth and John G. Kroll, also of Buffalo, in the men's pair championship at Asbury Park. The contract was a mere two clubs, but the imagination and skill brought by Stearns and Maier to the defense, which re sulted in holding the contract to two, preventing an overtrick, would have complimented a grand slam. The fine play of the experts did not go unrewarded, for at match-point tournament play, preventing an overtrick at two clubs sometimes results in as fine a score as defeating a grand slam.

Placing most of the honor cards with East, for his opening bid, Stearns made the spectacular underlead of a low card from the ace-and-one of diamonds. While aces are frequently underled, the ace is usually played from ace-and-one in the hope of gaining a ruff if partner holds the king. Stearn's play was even deeper; he thought it too optimistic to expect his partner to hold the king, but there was a chance that he held the queen and if dummy had the king declarer might duck the first round.

His appraisal proved correct Declarer, reading the seven as a low card from the queen, played small from dummy. Maier put up his diamond queen, which held the trick, and returned the diamond five. Stearns won and led a heart, which Maier took with the ace, giving his partner a diamond ruff.

Later the club king was won to hold the contract to two, declarer lost two diamonds, a diamond ruff, a heart and a club.

While Stearns undoubtedly would have returned a heart in order to gain the diamond ruff, Maier's play of the diamond five left nothing to chance. It was part of the lead-directing signal, which asks for the lead of the lower of two suits by the play of a high card. For example, had Maier played back the diamond nine, he would have asked for a spade lead. "The fall of each card is a message."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

An emphatic denial and disclaimer is rushed by air mail from Cincinnati by popular Henry C. Iler, chief of the organization department, American Federation of Government Employes:

"I am not a candidate for the office of president of the American Federation of Government Employes. I never authorized anyone to announce that I was a candidate. The statements appearing in the press were unauthorized by me and were printed without my knowledge or approval. I am serving as chief of the organization department of the A. F. G. E. and am happy that I am privileged to render service in this highly important field. It is my purpose and intention to continue my organization activities in the A. F. G. E."

As far as we know, nobody said that Iler had announced himself as a candidate. But on the fringes, there was a lot of talk about his seeking the place Col. Charles I. Stengle vacates. In any event, his statement of denial sews things up more tightly for Treasurer Cecil Custer, who, barring an earthquake, can be the president if he chooses.

An adventurous touch cropped out in the new announcement of civil service open competitive examinations. Although applicants for associate physical oceanographer, $3,200 a year, Treasury Department, must have been anchored to a desk to complete a four-year college course, including work in physics and calculus, employment in this position will mean service at sea for about five months each year.

As for more matter-of-fact details, professional experience in physical science is required (although certain education may be substituted), and applicants must not have passed their thirty-fifth birthday.

Among the assorted positions announced at the same time are these:

Junior engineer, $2,000 a year. Optional branches are aeronautical and naval architecture. The thirty-fifth birthday is the deadline for this position and also for junior marketing specialist, $2,000 a year, various optional subjects in the Agricultural Marketing Service of the Department of Agriculture.

Applicants for psychologist, $3,800 a year, must not have passed their fifty-third birthday; associate psychologist, $3,200 a year, forty-fifth birthday; assistant psychologist, $2,600 a year, fortieth birthday. These positions are in the Children's Bureau and the United States Public Health Service.

Applications for the positions listed in this announcement must be on file in the commission's office here by September 18 from States east of Colorado and by September 21 from Colorado and States to the west of it. Application blanks and fuller information are on tap at the commission's office here.

The Federal Bar Association at its weekly luncheon today at 12:30 at the Army and Navy Club will hear an address by Dr. Emery J. Woodall, assistant general counsel of the Federal Home Loan Bank.

Dr. W. W. Stockberger, special adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture on personnel matters, speaks of change, as follows: "Conservation is a deep-seated human trait which is often manifest as fear of or opposition to any change in the existing order of things. Yet without change there would be no progress . . . Organizations must change to keep pace with social and economic progress and to avoid fossilization. Opportunities for advancement are far greater in progressively changing organizations than in those where ultraconservatism constantly inhibits progress."

The Treasury Department Recreation Association's Camera Club will meet at 7:45 tonight in the Public Health Building auditorium, Constitution avenue and Nineteenth street northwest, to see a number of first-rate sound films on interesting subjects. The club will participate in the District of Columbia Day at the New York World's Fair. A photographic record of the trip will be made and shown at a subsequent meeting of the club. Aubrey B. Carter is president of the club.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

CHAPTER II.

"WHERE do you see him, generally?"

"Always here in Menemsha. He comes in often in his yacht and I see him rowing past when I'm on Captain Matt's wharf. He has to anchor out in the middle of the basin; he draws too much to tie up anywhere."

"Oh, so the president of our company is swelling around in a yacht, while us down-trodden stockholders have our dividends stopped. We must be paying him too much. Is he wandering around on pleasure, or is he here on our company business?"

"I don't know," she said. "They say in the village that the plant over there across the creek has been closed for months. Some islanders used to work there, but they've all been fired, except a Gay Head man who has been kept on as watchman. The off-islanders who worked there have all been taken away. From the water the place looks quite dead."

"I don't see why he should be coming in here regularly, then," I said. "How often would you say he is at Menemsha?"

"Perhaps every ten days or two weeks."

"It doesn't make sense," I reflected. "Why the regular calls at the harbor nearest the plant if the plant is shut down, or if he is just pleasuring himself in the yacht that you and I have bought for him?"

"Maybe he likes Menemsha. Lots of people love it. I do," said Adriana.

"So do I, already," I agreed. "But our Mr. Raskin doesn't sound like a quaint-fishing-village-lover, does he?"

"I guess the only way to find out is to ask him."

"Ask him? That would be an idea."

"I was only fooling," said Adriana.

"No, but it's an idea. If you'll keep still your childish prattle, I'll think about it."

"If you'd prefer his company to mine, Mr. Marriner, he's at Menemsha now."

"Really?"

"Well, at least I suppose so. His boat is in the Basin."

GEORGE DYER

"Which one is it? I'm interested in the palatial ocean greyhound that we've paid for so dearly. Can I see it from here?"

"All you have to do is to look out the cabin windows on the starboard side. It's that beamy white 50-50—the motor-sailer with the ugly hull lines and stunted masts directly up wind on your yawl. She's called the Patria."

"I noticed her this morning," I said, but I got up and looked again. She seemed even broader and larger than before, or maybe she was just nearer.

The girl watched me rather calculatingly.

"I was really kidding," she said, "about talking to that man. I don't think I would, if I were you. I'd leave him alone."

"Why, for heaven's sake?" I demanded. "Here Fate and Uncle Nathan have thrown me smack on top of him, and he's rolling in my dough—and your dough, too, if it comes to that. I'd be dumb not to play the luck for all it's worth. I want to size him up, and decide whether the lawyers in Boston are right that he ought to be sued a whole lot. Why shouldn't I talk to him?"

"Oh, I don't know. I don't like him," said Adriana. Her tone was as nearly evasive as it could be in so direct a person.

"I don't see that that means much. I probably shan't like him either."

"It's not just that he isn't nice," she said, with that frown reappearing on her forehead. "It's that he's—I think he's a dangerous person, too."

I RECALLED the girl's remark about it not being "safe" for us to be seen together when she had refused to discuss the Sea Reduction Corporation on the path from the village. I wouldn't be impressed.

"Lady," I said, "it's a recognized fact that a four-year term at Princeton corrodes the mind, but it builds beautiful bodies. Observe my physique. I'm not afraid of Mr. Raskin."

"I wasn't suggesting you are afraid of him. I'm not really scared of him myself, but he makes me go cold inside. And the islanders dislike and distrust him, and tell all sorts of things about what is going on over in that dead-looking plant."

"What sort of things?"

"Oh, nothing, I guess, really, when you pin them down. The place is surrounded with a high barber-wire fence, and they say electrified, too. And the Gay Head man who acts as watchman is one of the Gay Head Indians, and as tight-mouthed as a clam. So nobody can say what is going on inside, if, indeed, anything is going on. People say that they hear noises like a motor boat going and coming at times. They see lights moving on the dunes at night, and dim lights in the buildings—but of course that might be the watchman making his rounds, mightn't it?"

For some reason, she didn't sound convinced, and I sat and studied her for a little while. It was an occupation that was its own reward, anyway. After a couple of minutes I came back to a consideration of the Sea Reduction Corporation, and I said:

"I can't tell you how you whet my interest. Now I not only want to lock horns with Mr. Raskin, right away, but I want to sneak over some dark night and prowl around the buildings of our company. Doesn't it make you curious, too, Miss Blake?"

"Yes. But it makes me uncomfortable, just as much. And it also makes me uncomfortable to have you call me 'Miss Blake.' My name is Adriana."

"Thanks, Adriana. I've been all agog to call you that since yesterday. Garret is the name I used to be licked by, but I haven't been licked for some years. My friends call me Garry."

"All right, Garry," said the girl, and the name sounded fine from her lips.

"As a fellow-stockholder," said I, "I want you to back be in any moves I may think necessary to investigate our company, or to unmask Mr. Raskin and his shell game."

"OH, I WILL, of course. But I hope you'll look before you jump into anything risky. I have no proof, I'll admit it, but I have a hunch that any one who pokes his nose into the Sea Reduction Co. will be playing with dynamite."

"All the beter," I said, "I've always liked playing with dynamite. It makes such a beautiful loud noise."

"If you're far enough off to hear it," she suggested.

"I can still make the hundred yards in ten seconds flat. I'll be far enough away before anything blows up, don't worry. Is it a deal?" I got up, crossed the cabin, and offered my hand.

She, with her blue eyes looking squarely up into mine, took it without hesitation.

"You're pretty sure of yourself, aren't you?" she said. I grinned at her, and she added, "But I think you're nice, anyway."

"I think you're nice, too," I said generously.

"Thanks," she said, a bit drily.

Her hand felt small, but firm and good to hold. It was a useful-feeling hand. Sheet rope, tiller and halliards had laid a light stiffening of callous on the palm.

I was still holding it (to let her know how gladly I entered any sort of bargain with her) when someone jumped heavily onto the Adriana's deck over our heads. We could hear a hoarse voice, calling against the wind.

"Ahoy, on boart de Patri ahoy, dere! Look alive dere, on de Patria! You're dracking."

"What's he saying?" I asked, as I started for the hatch.

"He says the Patria is dragging her anchor. Heavens to Betsy! She'll come right down on us." Adriana lifted the MacGlashan's head hurriedly from her lap and jumped to her feet. "Get out some bumpers."

"I don't know where there are any," I said, suddenly feeling helpless again.

"Never mind, I do," said the girl, and as I threw back the hatch and swung up the steps I heard her add in a puzzled tone:

"I don't understand how he can be dragging. The wind is less now than it was earlier this morning."

THE BIG white motor-sailer was coming down on us, and coming down fast. When I stuck my head through the hatch she was about 150 feet away, and no once was visible on her.

Capt. Matt Hansen was dancing on the Adriana's deck in an agony of apprehension.

"He's not dracking; hiss anchor warp's partet! Hey! Hey, dere on de Patria! Hey" He glanced downward and added, "Oh, dat beautiful mahogany"

It looked as though Raskin's boat would strike us square amidships on the starboard side, with the port edge of her stern. I knew little enough of the strains there would be in such a collision, but it seemed to me that with so large a boat as the Patria descending on us at such a rate, and striking us at that angle, the Adriana must certainly have her side caved in. I hopped on deck, and the girl bounced out at my heels carrying two canvas-covered bumper pads.

Adriana joined Capt. Matt's shouting. A couple of fishermen appeared from the cabins of the boats between my yawl and the wharf and joined mightily in the chorus. I suppose I yelled, too, but I don't remember.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

C. F. Donohoe, Realty Dealer, Dies, Aged 61

Southeast Developer Survived by Wife, Daughter, Five Sons

Funeral for Clarence F. Donohoe, 61, president of John F. Donohoe & Sons, who died yesterday at his residence, 1743 Webster street northwest, will be held at his home at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Mass will be said at 10 a. m. at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

DONOHOE

A lifelong resident of the District, Mr. Donohoe was active in the real estate business for 45 years as an official of the Donohoe company, 314 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Instrumental in development of the southeast section of the city, he was largely responsible for the construction of the new Pennsylvania avenue bridge.

He was a director of a number of real estate and financial firms, including the American Building Association, the District Title and Insurance Co., the National Capital Bank and the National Capital Insurance Co. He was vice president of the Eastern Building and Loan Association and the National Mortgage and Investment Co., past president of the Washington Real Estate Board and active in the board of trade.

Surviving besides his wife, Clara, is a daughter, Miss Mary T. Donohoe, and five sons, John F., Clarence F., jr., Joseph, Harry and Francis Donohoe, all of Washington; a sister, Katherine D. Donohoe, and three brothers, Milburn J., James A. and S. Dolan Donohoe.

Mothers of 200 Shut-in Children Petition For New WPA Visiting Teacher Project

In an effort to get an educational program for handicapped children at the forthcoming school term, this group yesterday petitioned Mrs Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, for aid. Left to right—Mrs. Florence E. Welch, 35 Adams street northwest; Mrs. Charles Foele, Concord avenue northwest; Mrs. Manly Peele, 1700 Thirty-sixth street northwest, and Ruth Ross, 16, 1920 North Wayne street, Arlington, Va. Standing—Mrs. John O'Hara, 615 E street northeast

A group of mothers whose children never will run at the ringing of school bells gathered yesterday afternoon to make a new plea for visiting teachers for shut-in boys and girls.

On petitions presented at the meeting, more than 200 names of parents of handicapped children had been signed, seeking to re-establish a WPA project for their schooling.

The group met at the home of Mrs. John E. O'Hara, 615 E street northeast, to make plans for presenting the petitions to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, later this week. But before the mothers took up the business before them, they fell to talking of their problems at home—of their children who had a taste of schooling last spring but who face empty days this fall.

"My daughter couldn't read or write until the visiting teacher started coming last session, and she is up in her teens. She just seemed to bloom as she learned. Now she writes letters and reads easy books. But the days will seem almost empty to her if the visiting teacher doesn't come back this fall," one mother said.

One after another, the mothers told what new zest the visiting teachers had given to their children between November and June, when the project ended.

Into the room came a crippled girl who could show them the results of regular schooling, which their own children have lacked. Ruth Ross, 16, of 1920 North Wayne street, Arlington, goes to school in her own home because her mother, Mrs. C. P. Ross, conducts classes there for her and five other crippled pupils.

Afflicted with spastic paralysis, Ruth has struggled to make the progress which she displayed when she explained her typewriting and other activities to the group yesterday.

A committee of four mothers, Mrs. O'Hara, Mrs. Florence E. Welch, Mrs. Manly Peele and Mrs. Charles Feole, was selected to present the petitions to Mrs. Doyle, who Thursday will set a later time to meet the women.

The Board of Education has authorized Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Haycock to take steps toward another WPA project for schooling shut-in children. He will be back at his desk Monday and will look into the matter, Mrs. Doyle said yesterday.
